

Patty sobs fears, reveals bombing to jury

By LINDA DEUTSCH

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Speaking over the objections of her prosecutor, Patricia Hearst told her jury Friday of last week's million-dollar bombing at the Hearst castle — a sign, she said, that her life was still in danger.

Testifying on her 22nd birthday, the heiress blurted out her announcement just before U.S. Atty.

James L. Browning finished three days of cross-examination that sought to counter her self-portrait as a fear-stricken victim, even now, of the Symbionese Liberation Army.

"If they wanted me killed, all they had to do was say it," a sobbing Miss Hearst said of her former captors.

"It's happening right now," she added, telling the panel of the explosion at the panel of San Simeon and the threats against her family that followed. The sequestered jury had not previously heard the story.

It was a birthday nearly as bizarre as the past two, spent in the company of terrorists. Clad in blue blazer and slacks, Miss Hearst smiled when she opened a birthday card. Later, she was shown a picture of a cake held by one of the 15 would-be spectators outside the courtroom. Browning may cross-examine her again if the trial judge approves admission of evidence the defense is seeking to keep from the jury in her bank robbery trial. The evidence is a recorded jailhouse conversation and documents concerning Miss Hearst's movements before her arrest.

The star witness took the stand Feb. 13 to tell the jury, often tearfully, about her abduction and subsequent captivity by the SLA. Browning began questioning her Wednesday afternoon.

The prosecutor repeatedly sought to establish that Miss Hearst was a willing participant in the bank robbery and had undergone a genuine conversion to the terrorist ranks. Repeatedly, he implied, she passed up opportunities to leave the terrorist ranks.

Asked later if he planned to question his client again after a judge's ruling on disputed evidence, F. Lee Bailey said he had not yet decided but noted, "Redirect is to repair damage which has been done, and so far I can't see that any has been done."

The final witness of the day was Ulysses Hall, who testified about talks he had with Donald DeFreeze, the SLA's "Field Marshal Cinque." Hall, brought here from jail in San Joaquin County, said that DeFreeze had told him of threatening Miss Hearst with a gun just before the April 15, 1974, robbery of the Hibernia Bank.

Miss Hearst, crying for the second time in the day, said under Brownings persistent questioning that she feared SLA

Nixon trip seen as blow to Ford drive

By JAMES M. NAUGHTON
New York Times Service

PORSCMOUTH, N.H.—Richard Nixon's departure Friday on a visit to China has forced to the surface an awkward issue that President Ford had been hoping to avoid in his close and possibly crucial contest with Ronald Reagan in the New Hampshire Republican primary.

Ford boarded his Air Force jet Friday afternoon to return to Washington after his final campaign trip to New Hampshire, and three hours later, Nixon boarded a Chinese plane in Los Angeles on a visit that as White House and Ford campaign aides had feared, revived lingering questions and resentments about Ford's pardon of his predecessor 18 months ago.

Vice President Rockefeller says Nixon's trip may have been timed to help John Connally's bid for GOP presidential nomination. Story on Page A-4.

"Maybe," said one Ford associate wistfully, "New Hampshire Republicans will sympathize with the President because Nixon jobbed him."

But the more likely expectation, widely shared and generally resented among Ford's campaign workers, was that Nixon's revisit to Peking would do more harm than good to the Ford candidacy at a time when it could ill afford a setback.

As troublesome as Nixon's trip was in itself, said one Ford worker, the inclusion in the former President's party of 20 American journalists all but guaranteed that the Peking visit would be beamed back to New Hampshire television viewers in the three days before the primary vote.

The re-emergence of the troublesome "Nixon connection" was illustrated vividly when Ford answered questions Thursday night in the Keene high school gymnasium from residents of the city.

Reagan tells of Ford Cabinet-post offers

By JON NORDHEIMER
New York Times Service

MANCHESTER, N.H.—Ronald Reagan, seeking to defuse President Ford's contention that he is "too far to the right," said Friday that he twice had been offered Cabinet posts in the Ford administration.

The first proposal, Reagan explained, was made directly by the President in late 1974 when he held out the possibility of several Cabinet positions.

The second offer was made last spring by Donald Rumsfeld, the President's chief of staff, and the job of secretary of Commerce was specifically discussed, Reagan continued.

The candidate also suggested that the President had been "given some bad briefings by his own staff," claiming that the President was misquoting his views on Social Security and his controversial $90 billion federal transfer plan. He said Ford might ask his staff to let him hear the tape recordings they had been making of Reagan's campaign speeches to learn what he really has been saying.

The former governor referred to Ford's contention that he (Reagan) wanted to invest Social Security funds in the stock market, a proposal that Ford said would result in making the federal government "a major stockholder in most American businesses."

SLA mistrial declared

Associated Press

The judge in the trial of Symbionese Liberation Army members Russell Little and Joseph Remiro declared a mistrial Friday in Remiro's portion of the case after jurors reported they were hopelessly deadlocked.

Superior Court Judge M. Ross Bigelow scheduled March 25 for a hearing to set a date for retrial on Remiro.

The seven-woman, five-man jury found Little not guilty Thursday of assault and attempted murder charges stemming from a shootout with a Concord police sergeant in January 1974.

Both Little, 26, and Remiro, 28, are serving life sentences for the murder of Oakland Schools Supt. Marcus Foster.

Muskie lashes car makers for smog-control 'failure'

By ROBERT OSTMANN
Knight News Service

DETROIT—Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, lashed out at the automobile industry Friday for "its utter failure to adopt a sense of urgency in dealing with pollution problems."

He told the Economic Club:

"In the 1960s, we tried to leave it to the industry to voluntarily remedy the problem. Then the Clean Air Act was passed in 1970, and the industry has been given extensions until 1980 to meet air-quality standards. Still the industry regards auto-emission controls as dispensable, while air-pollution problems are clearly worse than we thought they would be by now."

"HOW LONG must the people wait for air that is fit to breathe?" he asked.

Muskie, a proponent of environmental legislation for many years in Congress, said he found the claims of industry and union officials that auto-emission controls would cost too much and eliminate too many jobs "tragically ironic."

"While the industry says we can do without devices that clean the air because they are too costly, it insists on putting air conditioners and power steering in cars, both of which are expensive and use energy," Muskie said.

Muskie, a presidential candidate in 1972 and Hubert Humphrey's running mate in 1968, also attacked President Ford's recent veto of a bill that would have created public jobs for the unemployed.

HE SAID the bill, which Ford described as "election-year pork barrel," would have meant $48 million for jobs in Detroit in the repair and construction of parks, schools, and other public facilities.

"When there are no jobs in the private sector, that is the time to construct needed public facilities," Muskie said. "That is the government's responsibility. I don't call that pork barrel."

"I find it appalling that a President is taking comfort in an unemployment rate of 7.8 per cent," said Muskie, who is chairman of the Senate Budget Committee.

The Senate failed Thursday by three votes to override the President's veto after the House had overwhelmingly voted to do so.

Muskie's news conference before the speech was disrupted by two men who identified themselves as representatives of the U.S. Labor Party. They began shouting at Muskie about his stand on First Amendment abuses by government before being forcibly ejected from the news conference by two reporters.

Ford orders aid reform

Combined News Services

WASHINGTON — President Ford has ordered the Agriculture Department to bypass Congress and swiftly "issue regulations which will set in motion the reforms needed" in the controversial food stamp program, it was disclosed Friday. Ford's decision came in letters sent to Rep. Thomas Foley, D-Wash., and Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., chairmen of their respective chamber's agriculture committees. The letters were dated Thursday — the same day a White House spokesman denied to the Senate Agriculture Committee that Ford had decided to make regulatory changes rather than await congressional action.

Boeing evidence

WASHINGTON — A federal judge ordered the Boeing Co. on Friday to provide the Securities and Exchange Commission with any evidence that the aircraft manufacturer made foreign payoffs to enhance its sales overseas. U.S. District Judge Thomas Flannery agreed, however, to set limits on making public the results or making public the results of an SEC investigation. Boeing has denied making any improper or illegal payments similar to those acknowledged by the Lockheed Aircraft Corp. and other large U.S. firms. The SEC had said it is seeking any records showing "disbursements of substantial sums" to foreign officials.

Sadat seeks aid for Egypt

Last of SEATO

CAIRO — President Anwar Sadat leaves today for Saudi Arabia and the Persian Gulf seeking new infusions of money to keep Egypt afloat and to demonstrate he remains the pre-eminent leader of the Arab world. Cash prospects look good, but political ones less certain. Sadat will spend five days in Saudi Arabia, then fly to Abu Dhabi, Bahrain, Qatar and Kuwait. Sadat needs Arab oil dollars to continue massive government supports to import essential commodities for Egypt's 38 million people, almost all of them poor. He also needs the cash to rebuild the country, run down after four wars since 1948 with Israel. The Egyptian view is that wealthy Arab regimes are morally obligated to help because Egypt bore the major burdens in these conflicts.

Early elections

BUENOS AIRES — President Isabel Peron's government scheduled elections for Dec. 12, but splits among Peronist party leaders raised new doubts Friday whether she would remain in office that long.

Elections normally would be held in March 1977, but Mrs. Peron said Wednesday night they would take place this year. She also said she would not run, but would serve until expiration of her current term May 25, 1977. Her announcement was seen as a compromise with critics who have urged her to step aside, making way for a leader more able to cope with Argentina's economic ills and guerrilla violence. Some of the critics predict a military coup if she stays. Informed sources also said six members of the 15-member Peronist Ruling Council resigned after a stormy session Friday, and that those who stayed demanded changes in Mrs. Peron's government.

Lost at sea

LONDON — A 54-year-old British yachtsman was reported lost at sea Friday night in his bid to become the first man to sail 4,000 miles across the Atlantic in 20 days. The Norwegian bulk carrier Senorita reported finding the 46-foot trimaran of Brian Cooke of Dorset, southwest England, capsized 450 miles off the Canary Islands. There was no sign of life. The last message from Cooke was Dec. 11 when he was becalmed 700 miles from the Canaries. Cooke was aiming to beat the 4,000-mile, 20-day target the late Sir Francis Chichester failed to reach by two days in his historic Atlantic crossing in Gipsy Moth V.

People in the news

CBS takes Schorr off CIA stories

Combined News Services

CBS News Correspondent Daniel Schorr has been taken off the intelligence story under CBS' policy against reporters covering stories they are involved in, an official said Friday in Washington.

"It's not a disciplinary action," said William Headline, assistant CBS news editor in Washington. "It's just that we found this is the only feasible way to do it."

Schorr was reassigned from covering the controversy over the Select House Intelligence Committee's report last week after he confirmed he was responsible for publication of part of the report in The Village Voice, a New York weekly newspaper.

Schorr was to have continued covering other intelligence developments in Washington, but Headline said the bureau found the House story could not easily be separated from other developments.

For example, he said, Schorr might be sent to cover Central Intelligence Director George Bush and find the story involved Bush's comments on the House report.

Headline said CBS' decision was not related in any way to the House's order to the Ethics Committee Thursday to investigate the newspaper publication of the report and Schorr's role in it.

Schorr has been put on general assignment, Headline said. He said no decisions have been made on what specific stories

Schorr will cover or who will cover intelligence developments.

The Justice Department's criminal division and the FBI are conducting a preliminary review of the various leaks of portions of the intelligence committee's report to determine whether there is evidence that any laws have been broken and whether a formal investigation should be started.

Entertainers

Loretta Lynn has been named entertainer of the year by the Academy of Country Music at its 11th annual awards dinner at the Hollywood Palladium.

Miss Lynn was also named female vocalist of the year and Conway Twitty was named male vocalist of the year at the award ceremony on Thursday. They were cited as the top vocal group and their recording of "Feelings" was named album of the year.

Glenn Campbell's "Rhinestone Cowboy" was named single record of the year and song of the year.

Crystal Gayle was selected as most promising female vocalist and Freddie Fender as most promising male vocalist.

The Palomino Riders with Jerry Linnan was named the non-touring band of the year. The Strangers with Merle Haggard was selected as touring band of the year.

Billy Parker of radio station KVOO in Tulsa, Okla., was named disc jockey of the year.

Nobelist

Rene Cassin, winner of the Nobel Peace Prize in 1968 and one of the first Frenchmen to rally to Gen. Charles de Gaulle and the Free French in World War II, died Friday in a Paris hospital. He was 88.

A jurist by profession, Cassin passed most of his career in French government service. As vice chairman of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights, he worked closely with Eleanor Roosevelt in framing the Declaration on Human Rights. Later he was president of the European Court of Human Rights. His efforts in this field led to his Nobel prize.

Writer

American poet and short story writer Elizabeth Bishop, who won a Pulitzer Prize for her volume of verse "A Cold Spring," was named winner Friday of the biennial Books Abroad-Neustadt International Prize for Literature in Norman, Okla.

She is the first American ever to win the award, given by the University of Oklahoma and "Books Abroad," the oldest international English language literary quarterly. She was selected over nine other nominees from throughout the world by a panel of judges representing 11 countries.

Kesey

Novelist Ken Kesey has filed suit in federal court in Portland, Ore., against the owners, producers and distributors of a film based on his book, "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest."

Kesey, who filed the complaint Thursday, said the defendants have breached a contract entitling him to 5 per cent of the film's gross receipts. He also seeks $869,000 in damages.

The movie version of the novel, released in December, has been nominated for nine Academy Awards, including best picture.

Kesey said he never consented to use of his name in connection with the film as it now exists. He alleged the defendants exploited his name and reputation in advance publicity for the film.

Film flap

Former middleweight boxer Sugar Ray Robinson asked $600,000 damages Friday in federal court in New York from three film distributors, charging they sold copies of films of his bouts without his consent.

Robinson, of Los Angeles, asked the court to enjoin sale of films by Turn of the Century Fights Inc., The Big Fights Inc., and Home Box Office, all of Manhattan. Robinson's lawyers claimed invasion of privacy and unlawful appropriation of his rights.

Singer Eddie Fisher says he has struck out at love for the fourth time. Fisher was quoted Friday by the London Daily Mirror as saying his fourth wife, 21-year-old college beauty queen Terry Richardson, has left him after less than four months of marriage.

"My wife is living with friends and there is no chance of us getting back together," Fisher was quoted as saying.

Super Bowl '77

A friend told me he heard on a sportscast there will no 1977 Super Bowl tickets available for the general public. The game is going to be played in the Rose Bowl. Is his report correct? R.E., Garden Grove.

Unless you are a season ticket holder for one of the two teams which play in the Super Bowl, you apparently haven't much chance of getting a ticket for the game. The bulk of the tickets for the Super Bowl are distributed by the clubs which play in the world series of professional football and clubs generally give their season ticket holders first crack at them. Each of the teams in the National Football League are allocated some Super Bowl tickets but, according to a spokesman for the Los Angeles Rams, "we got a couple of hundred (this year) and that wasn't enough even for our own team's needs." The team in the area where the game is played gets extra tickets — that would be the Rams in 1977 — but they are expected to be snapped up by the team's season ticket holders who, as with the competing clubs, will get top priority. Season tickets for the Rams go on sale in March and cost $60, $80 and $100. You may write the NFL at 410 Park Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022, for further information on the Super Bowl.

Polish song

Can Action Line find out the name of the Polish song that Bobby Vinton sings at the beginning and end of his television show? My husband and I love to hear this song and would like to buy a recording of it so that we can play it all the way through. E.C., Long Beach.

The song is entitled "My Melody of Love," which Vinton recorded last year as a single. It sold 2 million copies. You should be able to buy or order it at most record shops. In the early 1960s, Vinton, now 41, was a favorite with the teeny bopper set, but then faded from the spotlight along with most of the other rock-n-roll stars of that era. In 1975, Vinton, who is of Polish descent, cashed in on the ethnic-awareness trend and recorded "My Melody of Love," an old European tune to which he added Polish lyrics. Because of that recording, which was played regularly on the radio for months, Vinton attracted a sizeable following among older American Poles, was honored at the Polish consulate in Washington, D.C., and was signed to do a syndicated television variety show, which scores very high in the ratings in cities with large Polish communities.

Cleaning dispute

Bailey Rug and Upholstery Cleaners, 17918 S. Bellflower Blvd., in Bellflower, cleaned my wall-to-wall carpet Aug. 21 and the next week we noticed the carpet still had a dirty odor. Steve Cook, owner of the cleaning firm, came back to my home and sprayed a deodorant directly onto the carpet. This treatment caused spots and he came back twice more and shampooed the carpet in an attempt to remove them. All the spots didn't come out and the additional shampooing caused the carpet to become musty smelling. It also lost its body and became fuzzy. Cook said this was all his fault and agreed to pay $400 of the $773.31 that it would cost to replace the carpet. He didn't pay the money and he says now that he will not pay anything. Can you solve this problem for us? M.R.W., Lakewood.

No. Cook told us he feels the problems with the carpet are not his fault and that if you had let him come back after allowing time for the carpet to dry to continue working on the few remaining spots — which he described as a brown film — he could have removed them. He said the film was caused by a chemical reaction between the deodorant and your type of carpet and that he had sprayed deodorant on carpets many times without any problems. He said he hadn't "noticed the dog odor" when he first came out and that if you had told him "the carpet stunk, I'd have put the deodorant in the shampoo and there would have been no problem at all." Cook said he originally planned to pay part of the cost of a new carpet in order to keep your goodwill but said he didn't "recall saying $400." He said he decided not to pay when he "realized that no matter what I did, I'd lose her as a customer and she wouldn't recommend me" to others."

Merchant accused of peddling hot platters

Associated Press

James Greenwood, owner of the Licorice Pizza Co. record stores, has been named in a 33-count complaint filed Friday in Glendale Municipal Court.

Deputy Dist. Atty. Robert Cohen said Greenwood is accused of purchasing records "with the knowledge that the records were stolen."

Cohen said Greenwood allegedly received $11,000 in stolen property taken from the Wharehouse, K-Mart, White Front and Record Bar.

Sheriff's Deputy Thomas Budds said Greenwood allegedly bought the records from shoplifters at reduced prices for resale in his own stores.

Budds said Greenwood, owner of the Superior Music Co., the holding company for Licorice Pizza, will be asked to surrender for a preliminary hearing to be set in Glendale Municipal Court.

Lost hikers located

IDYLWILD (AP) — Eleven persons on a nature hike were stranded Friday in the Dark Canyon area of San Bernardino National Forest, authorities said.

The search began when the group failed to turn up at a campground Friday afternoon.

They were found at the 4,000-foot level in the rugged canyon area.

Gales that shut highways bring clear weekend sky

Winds that swept the Southland and toppled camper trucks in the deserts brought clean skies and "spectacular" weather for the weekend, a National Weather Service spokesman said.

Forecaster Bill Sullivan said the northwest winds of Thursday night and Friday morning were "shifted around" to a mild Santa Ana condition" Friday.

The result for the weekend is "very clear" air, with mild and warmer weather, he said.

Gale-force winds in the deserts earlier forced closure of Interstate 15 between Baker and Barstow and Interstate 40 between Ludlow and Newberry Springs for brief periods.

Wind and blowing sand also forced temporary closure of California 111 in Palm Springs, a police spokesman said.

THE HIGHWAY Patrol said at least 50 vehicles had to be towed away during a two-hour period in the Palm Springs area, and one officer said a wind gust blew out the rear window of his patrol car.

Sullivan said the winds, which also buffeted Long Beach with gusts up to 28 miles per hour, were caused by a low-pressure trough over Arizona and Utah.

Plane crash probe set

Associated Press

The Los Angeles City Fire Department will conduct a full investigation into a plane crash explosion that resulted in injuries to 16 firemen Feb. 8, Fire Chief Kenneth Long said.

Long told the Fire Commission Thursday that the investigation would center on steps to prevent a recurrence of explosive-type fires like the one that occurred when a DC-8 charter plane crashed on a San Fernando Valley golf course.

The fire chief said the fire resulted when sparks from a power saw ignited fuel that had spilled over the ground where firemen were standing.

"We may have to use more foam on the ground or spray foam in the future," Long said.

Other department spokesmen said the investigation also would focus on the clothing firemen were wearing and the types of burns they received.

"They have already come up with the recommendation that all field members will be wearing boots at least six inches high," said one spokesman. He said they also were urging firemen wear "turn-out pants" that are made of canvas and "have a higher tolerance" to heat and flame.

Rocky links Nixon trip, Connally bid

By ROBERT TYSKIN
Knight News Service

LANSING, Mich.—Vice President Nelson Rockefeller said Friday that former President Nixon may have timed his trip to China in hopes of opening the Republican presidential race to John Connally.

Rockefeller, here for a Michigan GOP fund-raiser, told a press conference that he thought the timing of the Nixon visit during the week of the New Hampshire primary was "unusual."

He said he didn't think Nixon's visit would affect the voting between President Ford and challenger Ronald Reagan in New Hampshire next Tuesday, "but whether that was the intent or not, that is another question."

When newsmen pressed Rockefeller to clarify whether he was saying Nixon was trying to help Reagan, he responded:

"You could make a whole series of scenarios."

And there is even another one you haven't mentioned... which is a little more complicated."

Pressed to explain that, Rockefeller said, "It related to a question about another possibility of who would be available — Mr. Connally."

Connally, a former Democratic governor of Texas, served as Nixon's secretary of the Treasury and in 1972 switched to the Republican Party.

Asked whether he was saying that Nixon was trying to help Connally, Rockefeller said "that's one of the scenarios. If one were speculating, that would certainly be one you would speculate about."

Rockefeller did not detail how Nixon's China visit would help Connally.

Presumably, under such a scenario, Nixon's visit would hurt Ford in New Hampshire but wouldn't help Reagan enough to make him a favorite for the Republican nomination.

Again, presumably, this would open the way in the later nominating process for Connally to slip onto the party's ticket.

Connally is being promoted as a write-in candidate in the Democratic primary in New Hampshire by an official fundraiser for Alabama Gov. George Wallace. Wallace is not running in the New Hampshire primary.

Rockefeller predicted that Ford would win in primaries in New Hampshire, Florida and Illinois "and go on to win the nomination."

"Gov. Reagan's campaign peaked too early," Rockefeller said.

The vice-president said that he could not "visualize any way" that he would run for president this year.

poor showing in the early primaries, Rockefeller might step into the presidential campaign.

In other matters, Rockefeller said he supported a $750 million community-development program bill sponsored by Rep. Gary Brown, R-Mich., in the wake of Ford's veto of the Democratic-sponsored $6.2 billion jobs bill.

Rockefeller spoke at a Republican Bicentennial tribute dinner Friday night.

Ford urges Congress to revive election unit fast

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford urged Congress on Friday to take all the simple and necessary steps of reconstituting the Federal Election Commission in a constitutional manner and not to introduce any other changes now.

Noting that there were only nine days left for Congress to comply with the Supreme Court's March 1 deadline to correct constitutional errors in the commission, Ford said: "There is simply no time to consider with sufficient care amendments to the law which are not essential to compliance with the Supreme Court decision."

He said that with the primaries just beginning this was not the time to introduce "changes and new uncertainties into the law."

Ford wants simply to correct the appointment of members to the commission, which the court said was unconstitutional because Congress named some of them.

Ford's comments came after the chairman of the Senate elections subcommittee, Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., unveiled a bill coupling partial public financing of congressional campaigns with a restructuring of the commission.

But Ford's proposal was simply to make the commission members presidential appointees subject to confirmation by the Senate and to leave the commission intact otherwise through the 1976 elections.

Moynihan said his discontinuance of the arrangement did not necessarily mean he found anything wrong with it.

James Leonard, president of the U.N. Association of the U.S.A., estimated that the organization paid "probably over $100,000 and well under $200,000" to the U.S. mission, during the 1961-65 period of the late Adlai E. Stevenson's ambassadorship.

"I PERSONALLY see nothing wrong with it," Leonard said, "and would not in any way censure my predecessors for having developed this arrangement."

He said Stevenson began giving money he received for speeches to a forerunner of Leonard's organization, the U.N. Association of the U.S., and remarked about the mission's skimpy entertainment — or "representation" — allowance. Leonard said he did not know whether all ambassadors after Stevenson took the money.

Others who served in that period were Arthur J. Goldberg, George Ball, J. Russell Wiggins, Charles W. Yost and George Bush.

The federal budget for the fiscal year ending next June 30 contains $58,000 to pay for diplomatic lunches, dinners and receptions.

rules under which citizens may be allowed to participate in the 1976 elections, and I urge that the Congress take only the simple and necessary steps of reconstituting the Federal Election Commission in an appropriate constitutional manner."

FORD ISSUED the statement after meeting with members of his staff at the White House Friday evening upon his return from a campaign trip in New Hampshire.

Pell presented his own measure at a subcommittee meeting called to consider various bills introduced in the wake of the Supreme Court's decision that the FEC may not perform executive functions under its present structure.

Pell's bill is similar in most respects to one proposed earlier this week by Rep. Wayne L. Hays, D-Ohio, except for its public-financing provisions.

Hays is chairman of the House Administration Committee, which is expected to take up the measure early next week.

THE THREE Senate subcommittee members agreed to refer Pell's bill, without recommendation, to the full Rules Committee, its parent body, for consideration.

Sens. Dick Clark, D-Iowa, and Robert P. Griffin, R-Mich., the other subcommittee members, said they each have substitute proposals. And Pell said he wasn't wedded to all the details of his bill.

Thus, differences will be threshed out when the Rules Committee meets at a date not yet set.

Under the Supreme Court's Jan. 30 decision, Congress is facing a March 1 deadline for passing legislation to restructure the commission or have it lose most of its powers.

The 1974 campaign-finance law that created the commission provided for appointment of four of its six members by Congress. The court ruled that an executive agency could not be so constituted under the separation-of-powers doctrine.

All the bills introduced since then provide for presidential appointment of the commission members, subject to Senate approval, but many of them also propose controversial changes in the 1974 law.

This has raised doubts that Congress can pass legislation before the end of the month to keep the commission functioning.

Maddox in N.H., denounces Carter as 'radical liberal'

Knight News Service

MANCHESTER, N.H.—Lester Maddox, who preceded Jimmy Carter as governor of Georgia, held a press conference here Friday to denounce Carter as "a radical liberal" and "the most dishonest person I've ever known in my life."

Maddox, a segregationist who most recently served under Carter as lieutenant governor, accused the Democratic presidential hopeful of being on both sides of such issues as abortion and right-to-work laws. He also said that Carter's much ballyhooed economics in Georgia state government now cost the state's taxpayers an additional $100 million a year.

Maddox said that his trip here was paid for by "six friends" whom he would not name. Although Maddox dubbed Carter "a radical liberal" most other observers view Carter as the most conservative of the five major Democrats entered in New Hampshire's presidential primary.

Maddox disclosed that on his arrival in New Hampshire Thursday night one local Democrat whom he did not identify gave him a list of persons allegedly supporting Carter who also supported liberal George S. McGovern in 1972. Maddox said this proved that Carter, who once ran on the same ticket as Maddox, is no conservative but rather, "the Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde of 1976."

Carter's supporters jammed into Maddox's press conference and at one point Maddox told one of them to "shut up" when she tried to ask a question.

Jody Powell, Carter's press secretary responded to Maddox's charges.

Miss., Puerto Rico delegates

Associated Press

MISSISSIPPI and Puerto Rico will select presidential nominating delegates over the weekend, with George Wallace strategists expecting to pick up more than half of the 18 Mississippi delegates and Sen. Henry Jackson favored to be the top vote-getter in Puerto Rico.

The Mississippi conventions, to be held Saturday in each of the five congressional districts, will also elect the state party's executive committee and set the stage for the Feb. 29 state convention.

Mississippi will send 24 delegates to the national convention in New York, with the five remaining delegates chosen at the state convention.

Former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter and former Peace Corps director and Kennedy in-law R. Sargent Shriver, two other candidates who waged active campaigns for Mississippi support, also hope to pick up delegates.

The caucuses in San Juan on Sunday could give a boost to one or more of the Democratic presidential hopefuls, especially since the voting results will appear in Monday's papers, the day before New Hampshire votes cast ballots in the nation's first primary.

Puerto Rico will send 17 delegates and 16 alternates to the Democratic convention. The caucuses are open and theoretically anybody could be nominated. But only four major contenders bothered to designate "moderators" to represent them: Carter, Jackson, Shriver and Sen. Birch Bayh of Indiana.

Five at-large delegates and four more alternates from Puerto Rico will be chosen March 7.

In Mississippi, two Democratic factions are cooperating in the delegate selection process for the first time since the civil rights-oriented Loyalists wrested national party recognition from the state-dominant Regulars in 1968.

A large uncommitted bloc elected to the congressional district caucuses will be a major factor in deciding the final division of strength among the candidates or whether there will be unpledged delegates to the national convention. The uncommitted can switch to a candidate at the caucuses or remain unpledged.

Slightly more than half of the delegates elected by last week's county conventions to the caucuses are pledged to all and the uncommitted pool was 28 per cent. Carter has 11 per cent and Shriver 10 per cent.

Of the 19 delegates to be selected Saturday, we expect Gov. Wallace to receive between 9 and 11," said state campaign spokesman Jack Shearer Jr. "The problem is that in a couple of districts you can't tell what the groups representing the other candidates will do if they fall below the required percentage. You can't anticipate new alignments."

Under party rules, a candidate gets no delegate votes unless his supporters constitute at least 15 per cent of those attending the caucuses. Supporters falling under that percentage are free to join another group or to withdraw from the selection process.

A state party spokesman said the nominating delegates must support their candidate for the first round of presidential balloting at the national convention, "but they can switch after that."

AFL-CIO opens campaign for nursing-home reforms

By ROBERT A. DOBKIN
AP Labor Writer

MIAMI BEACH — The AFL-CIO Friday announced a nationwide campaign to "clean up this nation's nursing homes," calling them a scandal and a national disgrace.

AFL-CIO leaders said community service committees in each of the labor federation's state and local central bodies would be asked to investigate nursing homes and make results public in hope of spurring official investigations.

"We seek no spit and polish tour," the labor federation said in a statement adopted by its

The council charged that the federal government has "shamefully ignored" investigating the nursing home industry despite extensive testimony and documentation exposing "frauds and ripoffs."

"The AFL-CIO demands action," the council said. "The patients in nursing homes are our members, our parents, our friends and our relatives."

In its statement, the council said that some nursing home operators — particularly of profit-making homes — medical laboratories, clinics, doctors and insurance company officials "are skimming their share off the top of the Medicare and Medicaid programs, reducing care for the elderly and subverting public support for these important programs."

Nelson Cruikshank, president of the National Council of Senior Citizens which represents three million elderly persons, said the Department of Health, Education and Welfare has not carried out its responsibility for investigating the nursing home industry.

New beef grades: few shoppers will spot difference

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press

New government standards for grading beef take effect Monday after almost a year of controversy and court battles, but shoppers will find it hard to spot the difference at the supermarket.

Consumer groups — still trying to get the Supreme Court to hear their case — argue that the new standards mean people will be paying "choice" prices for beef that used to be graded only "good."

The U.S. Department of Agriculture says shoppers won't be able to tell the difference in appearance or taste. They also say the changes will cut costs for cattlemen by enabling them to feed their animals less grain and therefore help keep retail prices down.

THE USDA ORIGINALLY planned to put the new standards into effect last April. Court suits and arguments held up implementation.

Meanwhile in Dallas, U.S. District Court Judge Patrick E. Higginbotham said Friday that he would decide today or Sunday whether to grant a temporary injunction sought by the Texas baby-beef industry against the Department of Agriculture's implementation of the rules.

Industry spokesmen have testified that the new grading would mean higher prices for consumers because stores would refuse to buy the new downgraded "standard" light beef.

Even if the injunction is granted, the USDA could appeal to the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

"But it would be pretty hard to get a stay before Monday morning," said Stephen Holley, an attorney for the industry.

Regardless of the judge's decision, a more detailed hearing will be held later to decide if the industry should be granted a permanent injunction.

FOR MILLIONS OF PEOPLE, the change in standards won't mean anything at all. That's because several major chains do not sell graded beef.

Grading should not be confused with inspection. All meat sold for human consumption is inspected for wholesomeness. Grading, which is voluntary, applies only to tenderness, flavor and juiciness.

The USDA reports that in the first nine months of 1975 only 45 per cent of all federally inspected beef was graded. Of this, 5 per cent was graded "prime," 78 per cent was graded "choice" and 13 per cent was graded "good." The rest was graded "standard" and "utility" and went into things like processed meats.

Much of the ungraded beef also went into processed meats, but a USDA spokesman said there were "considerable quantities of ungraded beef at the retail level."

The amount of ungraded beef available at retail stores has grown steadily in recent years. The increase reflects changes in the way cattle are raised and shifts in American tastes.

ON THE ONE HAND, ranchers faced with rising corn prices cut back the amount of grain they fed their animals. This meant leaner cattle that did not meet the marbling standards for choice-grade beef and therefore were marketed as ungraded.

At the same time, consumers were looking for less expensive meat. They were concerned about fat in their diets and wanted leaner cuts, so they were more willing to buy beef without the government grade stamp.

A&P, the nation's second largest chain, has its own rating system and sells government-graded beef only where it is required by local law. Why doesn't the chain offer the graded varieties? "You try to sell your own identity," said an A&P spokesman. "We never have (sold government-graded beef), and we think the customer has been well satisfied."

Even if your store does sell graded beef, you may find it difficult to spot any changes unless you are expert enough to recognize the differences in the marbling. In addition, the changes will affect only a small portion of the meat sold. Most of the beef you find graded "choice" on Monday would have been graded "choice" on Friday.

Here are some questions and answers about the new standards:

Q. Just how is beef graded?

A. Federally inspected beef is graded according to the age of the animal it comes from and the amount of marbling it has. The beef is graded according to tenderness, juiciness and flavor. Under the new rules, all beef that is graded for quality also has to be graded for yield. That means the inspector will determine how much actual meat a carcass will yield. Meat packers opposing the new standards argued that yield grading would add costs; the USDA says any increase will be "insignificant," maybe about a penny per hundred pounds of meat.

Q. How does marbling differ from regular fat?

A. Marbling is flecks of fat within lean meat as opposed to the solid strip of fat around the meat. Marbling usually disappears during cooking.

Banking complex files bankruptcy

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Hamilton Bancshares Inc., the Chattanooga bank holding company whose major subsidiary was declared insolvent Monday, filed Friday for voluntary bankruptcy in the U.S. District Court for East Tennessee.

In the court petition, Hamilton Bancshares also filed bankruptcy for three nonbanking subsidiaries — Hamilton Mortgage Corp. of Atlanta and Hamilton Financial Services, Inc., and Hamilton Factors, Inc., both of Chattanooga.

"We take this action because of the financial condition of these companies and a desire to see the claims of the companies' creditors liquidated in an orderly fashion," said a Bancshares statement.

Hamilton National Bank of Chattanooga, owned by Bancshares, was declared insolvent by the U.S. comptroller of the currency last Monday. The bank's assets were pur-

Economy spurs record stocks volume

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first decline in retail food prices in five months contributed to a further slowdown in the nation's inflation rate in January, the government reported Friday.

There also were lower prices during the month for gasoline, heating fuels and new cars, while prices rose for postage, auto insurance and medical care.

The Labor Department said overall consumer prices in January rose four-tenths of 1 per cent on a seasonally adjusted basis, down from a five-tenths increase in December.

Meanwhile, the New York Stock Exchange closed Friday at its highest level in more than three years, passing the 40 million-share mark for the first time in the exchange's history in the process.

inflation.

Investors evidently read the dividend increase announced by American Telephone & Telegraph Co. on Wednesday as an expression of strong opti-ports, while opponents will use unfavorable statistics to attack the President.

Progress against inflation was clear in the 12-month figures, which showed consumer prices were up 6.8 per cent in January over a year earlier. That was the lowest 12-month increase since July 1973, when prices had risen by 5.7 per cent.

The Labor Department said its Consumer Price Index for January stood at 166.7 per cent of the 1967 average, meaning that goods that cost $100 in 1967 were selling for $166.70 last month.

Without taking into account seasonal factors, overall consumer prices increased only two-tenths of 1 per cent in January, the smallest actual increase since July of 1973, when they rose the same amount.

Consumer price index not for family budget

Associated Press

The ups and downs of the Consumer Price Index provide clues for the experts about the course of the economy, but don't try to translate the statistics into the language of the family budget. It won't work.

Aside from the fact that the index measures only a limited set of items and doesn't include things like taxes, there are other factors to take into account when trying to understand the percentages.

Many of the figures released by the Bureau of Labor Statistics are seasonally adjusted. That means they are increased or decreased to reflect what usually happens at a particular time of the year, like Christmas.

LOOK at the latest figures, released Friday. The Consumer Price Index went from 166.3 in December to 166.7 in January. If you do a little arithmetic, you'll find an increase of two-tenths of 1 per cent. But, says the bureau, the seasonally adjusted increase was four-tenths of 1 per cent.

The bureau computes the seasonally adjusted index for December and the seasonally adjusted index for January, then subtracts and divides. The bureau does not publish the seasonally adjusted indexes. It discloses only the seasonally adjusted increase or decrease.

Once you're used to the idea of seasonal adjustments, you might try translating the monthly rate into an annual one. You can't just multiply by 12. You have to use a formula for compound growth to take into account the fact that the base is changing.

SUPPOSE an item costs $100. It goes up 10 per cent in a month. If you multiply by 12, you get an annual rate of 120 per cent.

You have to remember, however, that the item that costs $100 this month costs $110 next month because of the 10 per cent increase. If you take 10 per cent of $110, you get $11. Add $11 to the $110 for the next base price of $121. At the end of 12 months, the increase in the actual cost will be 210 per cent.

GM to recall 2,000 laid-off plant workers

Knight News Service

Detroit — General Motors Corp. announced that second-quarter production boosts at two more car assembly plants in May will result in the recall of approximately 2,000 hourly workers from indefinite layoffs.

Approximately 1,000 employees will be recalled at the Pontiac car plant in Pontiac, Mich., and the adjoining Fisher Body plant on May 17 and 24 and another 1,000 at the Linden, N.J., assembly plant, where the second shift will be restored May 17.

The latest change in production planning, the second announced by GM this week, adds another 7,000 to 8,000 cars to the 1,350,000 second-quarter target that GM set earlier this week.

"This (increase) is another firm indicator that our industry is moving steadily forward," GM President E.M. Estes said.

The resumption of second shift operations at Linden reduces to three the number of GM's car assembly plants that remain on single shift operations.

Consumer prices rose slightly in the Long Beach-Los Angeles area in January as the cost of living index reached a record 164.7, the federal Bureau of Labor Statistics said Friday. The index increased 0.6 per cent last month, making it 8.2 per cent above prices this time last year. A bureau spokesman said goods and services that cost $10 in the base year of 1967 cost $16.47 last month.

of 30 industrials climbed 12.04 to 987.80, its highest close since it finished at 996.76 on Feb. 13, 1973.

The NYSE volume totaled 44.5 million shares, besting the old mark of 39.21 million set Thursday.

Analysis attributed the record-setting day to signs of improving business conditions and the stabilizing of interest rates and mism over the business outlook by the nation's most widely held corporation.

The January price rise was well within the Ford administration's inflation target for 1976 of just under 8 per cent, and President Ford said it shows his policies are working.

"What we've done is really get a handle on one of the most insidious, adverse economic factors," he said during a campaign appearance at Dover, N.H.

The Labor Department also had good news for wage earners, reporting that real spendable earnings of workers increased two-tenths of 1 per cent during January and 4.3 per cent for the 12-month period.

The growth in workers' spendable earnings—which are earnings after the effects of taxes and inflation are subtracted—has been a major factor in the nation's steady recovery from recession.

Economic statistics undoubtedly will play a key role in the presidential campaign, with Ford and his advisers trying to get as much mileage as possible out of favorable re-

Russian space exploit fails

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON—The Soviet Union apparently failed this week in testing a system for intercepting and destroying satellites, U.S. intelligence sources say.

The test involved only Russian satellites, and no attempt was made to interfere with any U.S. satellites in space, the sources say.

The 1972 Nuclear Arms Limitation agreement forbids Russia and the United States from interfering with each other's spy satellites or any other means of monitoring compliance with that agreement.

However, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger has said the 1972 agreement does not prohibit the Russians from testing an antisatellite system, so long as they don't deploy it.

The United States tried to develop a satellite-killing system, but gave it up in the 1960s. It is reported to have a system for examining potentially hostile satellites which might be armed with nuclear weapons, but not for destroying them.

THE SOVIET test this week was said to have been the first significant one since 1971, when three successful satellite interceptions reportedly were made.

Intelligence sources said the Russians sent up a target satellite, Cosmos 803, on Feb. 12 from their launch base at Tyuratam in the central Soviet Union.

Four days later the Russians fired aloft Cosmos 804, an interceptor, into the same orbital plane as Cosmos 803. The orbit had an apogee of 698 miles and a perigee of 149 miles from earth.

The sources said the apparent attempt to intercept was made over the Soviet Union after Cosmos 804 had completed one orbit.

Experts suggest that its sensors may have malfunctioned and the interceptor did not get close enough to the target satellite to destroy it. They do not know the reason for the apparent failure.

Perils still remain at A-plant, engineer says

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. (AP)—Engineer Dale Bridenbaugh, who participated in tests that preceded the shutdown of the Vermont Yankee Nuclear Plant, said Friday a major accident was still possible at the plant, although modifications now under way would make the plant safer.

Bridenbaugh recommended Vermont Yankee officials for unilaterally shutting down the plant when the safety problems were discovered.

He said the modifications now under way at the plant would correct the most recently discovered safety problems, but the design errors that led to the safety problems would remain.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) allowed the plant to resume operations last week after approving Vermont Yankee's plans to install steel supports to bolster the safety system.

Bridenbaugh appeared at a press conference with two other engineers who resigned recently from the General Electric Co. to dramatize their concern about the safety of nuclear power.

They concentrated their comments on the 540-megawatt Vermont Yankee plant in nearby Vernon.

Bridenbaugh worked on tests of the Vermont plant that showed a safety system for the plant's pressure chamber might not function properly in an accident. The tests led to a recent three-week shutdown of the plant.

The study cost the Department of Transportation less than $10,000 and was completed in two months—although it undoubtedly drew on many years' experience

'Few decades, few billions' may help project

Search for space life fruitless—so far

Knight News Service

BOSTON—Mankind's first systematic search for intelligent life on other planets has produced evidence that the universe might be a lonelier place than had been calculated, scientists reported here Friday.

But, encouraged by the fact that the search is going on at all, astronomers said that there is a fair chance of success, given a few decades and maybe a few billion dollars instead of the pittance they now have.

Speaking at a session on extraterrestrial intelligence at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science here, Carl E. Sagan, director of the laboratory for Planetary Studies at Cornell University, pointed out that quick success can hardly be expected from an effort that is so young and so newly arrived at, scientific respectability.

At Friday's session, there were reports from six groups—two in the Soviet Union, one in Canada and three in the United States—that have been scanning the skies for radio signals from intelligent beings elsewhere in the universe. Nothing has been found.

MOST OF THE GROUPS have been looking for signals from individual stars, Sagan said. Since only about 1,000 stars were scanned, he said, success was unlikely.

There are some 250 billion stars in the galaxy, meaning that several hundred thousand stars may have to be scanned to find one civilization.

More discouraging is the failure of Sagan and another Cornell professor, Frank D. Drake, who both used the world's largest radio telescope in Arecibo, Puerto Rico in a scan of other galaxies.

Drake and Sagan studied three galaxies in the "local cluster" around the galaxy that contains our sun, as well as a far-off galaxy in the constellation Virgo.

"Of the trillion stars in the galaxies we look at, there was not a signal evident at the time of our observation," Sagan said. "This means that no civilization in those galaxies is devoting a major effort to communicate with us at that level."

But Sagan took some cheer from the thought that earthlings still may not know the proper method to communicate with other civilizations and that a more sensitive method could still detect weaker signals.

Better results might be obtained when and if the U.S. commits itself to project Cyclops, a $4-billion array of 250 radio telescopes, each 330 feet wide, devoted to finding another civilization.

Meanwhile, he said, it is discouraging to realize that mankind has unintentionally sent signals to other civilizations—the signals from television broadcasts, which are travelling out into the universe.

"Television signals are our interstellar emissaries," he said. "If you wonder why these beings haven't been here, now you know. They're very intelligent."

Greater airline-price freedom asked

Washington Star

WASHINGTON—Greater pricing freedom for the nation's airlines is likely to produce a huge growth in airline travel and lower fares—possibly savings of up to $600 million a year for airline passengers—a government-sponsored study says.

A draft copy of the report—to be published soon—says greater pricing freedom would likely develop a high-volume, low-cost service on heavily traveled routes.

Such a system, the report says, would have to be accompanied by development of satellite airports. Thus, fares could reflect convenience: low fares for frequent service between Baltimore-Washington International Airport and Newark Airport, with higher fares between Washington's National Airport and LaGuardia in New York.

THE report essentially agrees with Ford administration legislation seeking substantially less regulation of the airlines. The study was made by Simat, Helliesen & Eichner, Inc., a Boston-based consulting firm specializing in airline work.

The study cost the Department of Transportation less than $10,000 and was completed in two months—although it undoubtedly drew on many years' experience by the consulting firm.

The report says that the experience of highly successful and low-priced intrastate airlines—specifically those in Texas and California—should be put to use nationally.

Airlines in both states have developed into specialized companies that fly large numbers of passengers on heavily traveled routes at lower fares than airlines regulated by the Civil Aeronautics Board.

In each case, satellite airports have aided their success. And fare flexibility in Texas has led to a two-tiered pricing system which has resulted in far greater personal travel by air.

A two-tiered pricing system may mean higher prices in peak travel periods or higher prices to use more convenient airports.

The report concedes there may be some problem with substantial competition in fares because some present fares charged by CAB-regulated airlines subsidize less-profitable routes.

Nevertheless, the report says, there are 60 inter-

Average savings would be $11 per passenger, or more than $200 million a year at existing levels of business, the report says.

The report added cities that offer promise as a base for such operations include New York, Chicago, Washington-Baltimore, Boston, Pittsburgh, Atlanta, Cleveland, Philadelphia and Detroit.

In Senate testimony

Knight News Service

WASHINGTON—Transportation Secretary William T. Coleman Friday defended his decision to allow the Anglo-French Concorde supersonic jetliner to land in the United States, saying that if the big plane is to fail it should do so on its own, not because the U.S. banned it.

Testifying before the Senate Aviation subcommittee, Coleman said that the 16-month trial period he has allowed for the Concorde was in the best interests of the U.S. because there are as yet no facts to back up objections to the SST based on excessive noise, commercial viability and possible destruction of the earth's ozone layer.

The six flights a day that he has allowed—four to New York's John F. Kennedy Airport and two to Dulles International Airport outside Washington—would be conducted under strict controls and limits, Coleman said.

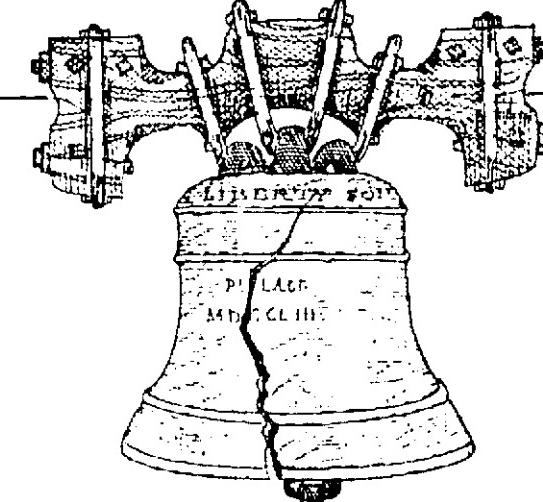

He said that if the trial period should show that Concorde is not economically feasible "in the energy and environmentally conscious period in which we live, the Concorde will fail because it is an anachronism, and its failure will be recognized as such rather than attributed to an arbitrary and protectionist attitude of the U.S. out of fear that our dominance over the world's aeronautical industry is threatened."

Coleman noted that if the flights prove to be too much of a problem, he can suspend them on four months' notice, or any

A number of suits have been filed to block the British Airways and Air France SST flights. There is also the possibility that New York State officials may ban the proposed JFK landings.

The Senate subcommittee is conducting hearings on Coleman's controversial decision. In his prepared statement, the secretary said, "Whether or not you agree with my decision—and I expect it has not met with unalloyed acclaim in any quarter—I hope you will at least agree that it has been made openly."

Simon charges UC investment errors

Associated Press

Industrialist Norton Simon said Friday that the University of California's $1.45 billion investment portfolio is being mismanaged, putting the university in the position of a "stock market speculator."

Simon, attending the last meeting of his 18-year term on the Board of Regents, said the university is holding too many unproductive common stocks and low-yield bonds.

Some 80 per cent of the university's investable funds, he said, is tied up in common stocks yielding about 3 per cent. Since the university could be getting more than 8 per cent by investing in long-term government bonds, he said, the difference in yield amounts to speculation on the part of the UC trustees.

"There is no assurance that stocks will be capable of producing sufficient future gains to compensate for the substantial loss of current income," he explained.

Simon, who made his comments on the second day of the regents' regular monthly meeting in Los Angeles, called for a review of the portfolio and the creation of a separate Investment Department in the Treasurers Department.

He recommended that a study immediately be undertaken to determine if the state is putting too much money into the pension fund.

In addition to Simon, regents' Chairman Elinor Heller also attended the last meeting of her term. Gov. Brown now must appoint their successors, who will be the first two regents named by him.

attending meetings of the board's Investment Committee in order to learn more about the subject.

The regents are the stewards of the investment money, made up of pension, endowment and other funds. Simon said the fund is "eight times larger than in 1960 when I came onto this board," and he raised the possibility that the university may be overfunding its pension needs.

He recommended that a study immediately be undertaken to determine if the state is putting too much money into the pension fund.

Pesticide spending criticized

SACRAMENTO (AP)—

People's Lobby said Friday the State Department of Agriculture creates phony emergencies each year to justify spending $1 million on pesticides.

The self-styled citizens' action group distributed a 214-page book accusing the department of a "$1 million consumer and taxpayer ripoff" in its emergency pest-eradication program.

A department spokesman, Dick Thompson, said the accusation "is so specious we don't know how to respond." He said the department actually saves money on pesticides.

BUT Laura Tallian, author of the book "Politics and Pesticides" distributed by People's Lobby, claimed the department maintains a "slush fund" to buy pesticides needlessly.

"People's Lobby believes that the motivation for this boondoggling in pest eradication arises from the fact that $1 million annually from the state's off-road gasoline tax has been made available to the Department of Food and Agriculture for this use," she said.

She said examples of "boondoggling" included a million dollars spent in San Diego to saturate Balboa Park with chlordane to kill only Japanese beetles.

People's Lobby urged tight state controls on all pesticide use, and increased use of other insects rather than chemicals to control pests.

THOMPSON said the Balboa Park program and others criticized by Mrs. Tallian reduce total usage of pesticides because it is more efficient to conduct a coordinated spraying program than to have thousands of individuals do it.

"If individuals do it, more pesticides are used, and the unit cost is four or five times higher for the pesticides," he said.

Thompson said the $1 million cited by Mrs. Tallian is part of a $3.5 million annual fund from gasoline sales to farmers to power off-highway equipment.

Insurance firm fined for check-kiting

Associated Press

The nation's largest title insurance company has been fined $35,000 by the state, the last in a series of penalties for what authorities described as a huge check fraud scheme.

Title Insurance and Trust Co. earlier had been fined $10,000 on 10 federal criminal charges and had to pay $1.3 million to banks to settle its accounts.

State insurance officials said the company deliberately overdrew bank accounts by up to $50 million.

The state fine was announced in Los Angeles Friday, two days after Title Insurance's parent firm, TI Corp., pleaded no contest to the federal charges.

Besides the fines, the company was ordered to end hundreds of bank accounts which the insurance commissioner said it maintained only to influence banks to channel title insurance business its way.

U.S. official raps nuclear Prop. 15

Associated Press

A federal official contend Friday that approval of the Nuclear Safeguards Proposition on the June ballot would force the shutdown of nuclear power in California for the next 20 years.

The cost of finding alternative power sources during this time could amount to $40 billion, said Donald L. Reardon, deputy manager of the federal Energy Research and Development Administration.

REARDON testified at a hearing called in Los Angeles by the state Senate Committee on Public Utilities, Transit and Energy to assess the economic impact of Proposition 15 on the June primary ballot.

Walter V. Hays, speaking for Califorians for Yes on Proposition 15, denied that passage of the measure would mean a shutdown of nuclear power plants.

He contended it would simply require a review by the State Legislature of whether the risks of nuclear production are reasonable.

Hays said the utility companies have spent hundreds of thousands of dollars of their customers' money to fight the proposition and millions on pronuclear propaganda.

But, Hays said, the cost of implementing the safeguards would be only four cents per California resident.

He said teachers in several other districts have contacted the Teamsters. The union won't solicit members but will campaign in districts where it is called in and spend "whatever we need" in the campaigns, Haag said.

The new law allows teachers to choose a union to represent them in negotiations with school districts.

Expensive, hard-fought campaigns are expected in many districts between the California Teachers Association and the AFL-CIO California Federation of Teachers when representation elections begin in April.

Asked whether the Teamsters expected to unseat the established teacher groups, Haag said, "I don't think we're going to catch up with them in one year."

Both parties feel Chavez' pressure

KEENE (AP) — Cesar Chavez and his labor allies are trying to put pressure on both political parties to break the deadlock which has halted California's secret-ballot elections for farm workers.

The United Farm Workers said Friday that Chavez had sent a telegram to Mary Louise Smith, head of the Republican National Committee, asking for support, and state AFL-CIO leader John Henning has written to local Democratic chairman.

REPUBLICANS and rural Democrats are blocking a $3.8-million appropriation the Agricultural Labor Relations Board needs to continue holding secret-ballot elections through June.

The holdout legislators are pressing greater demands for changes in the law. Growers' groups contend the ALRB is biased in favor of Chavez' UFW, which has won a majority of the elections.

The state AFL-CIO said Henning has sent telegrams to 18 county Democratic chairmen, including those whose areas are represented by the six Democratic state senators who either opposed the appropriation or abstained.

Chavez' telegram to Mrs. Smith likened farm workers to the farmers who fought the British 200 years ago, and said, "The people will remember how Republicans acted in this historic year."

A bill appropriating the money fell seven votes

short of passage in the state Senate last month.

THE TELEGRAM, also sent to the state and national party chairmen, said Henning was speaking for 1.7 million AFL-CIO members in the state.

It said it was "a disgrace" that Democrats would oppose the appropriation. It asked the chairmen to "remember the great labor coalition which has existed through the years between the AFL-CIO and the Democratic Party."

Asked if that meant the AFL-CIO would campaign against Democrats who opposed the money, a spokesman said, "Mr. Henning believes the telegram speaks for itself."

Recently Henning said the AFL-CIO is considering making the appropriation an issue in this year's elections.

The state fine was announced in Los Angeles Friday, two days after Title Insurance's parent firm, TI Corp., pleaded no contest to the federal charges.

Besides the fines, the company was ordered to end hundreds of bank accounts which the insurance commissioner said it maintained only to influence banks to channel title insurance business its way.

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Three Tehama County persons have been sentenced to jail for poaching deer in a case involving at least eight of the animals, the Department of Fish and Game reported Friday.

Roger Garrett Price, 22, of Cottonwood was sentenced to six months in jail Wednesday by Red Bluff Justice Court Judge James Lang. Price pleaded guilty to the charge of illegally taking deer.

Fish and Game Director Charles Fullerton said recently that deer poaching was running wild throughout the state. His department described the sentence against Price as "stiff."

CHURCH WOMEN UNITEDL.B. women to join in day of global prayer

By MRS. JOHN G.

Past President, Long Beach
Church Women United

"Never underestimate the power of a woman." This is an old cliche but true — when applied to a group such as the local unit of Church Women United, one of more than 2,000 such groups scattered across the U.S.

On March 5, we will join in a globe-circling chain of prayer with millions of people in many countries. The worship service to be used everywhere was prepared by women in Latin America to reflect their concern for "Education for All of Life."

Services, all at 10 a.m., are scheduled for First United Methodist Church, 507 Pacific Ave., with Elsie Ferris speaking and with music by Golden West College; Lakewood Village Community Church, 4919 Centralia Ave.; Starr King United Presbyterian, 132 E. Artesia Blvd.; Leisure World Community Church, 14000 Church Place, Seal Beach Leisure World; and Brethren Manor, 3331 Pacific Ave.

COUNTED AS members here are more than 200 women from more than 57 churches who gather in a visible fellowship to witness our faith in Jesus Christ, to go out together into every neighborhood and nation as instruments of reconciling love.

Many denominations, age groups, socioeconomic level and ethnic groups are represented, with active participation by all encouraged. The Long Beach unit is associated with a larger group,

MRS. JOHN G. HOEPFL

Southern California-Southern Nevada Church Women United which, in turn, is a part of the movement on a national level.

CWU the world over holds "Three Great Days" or "Celebrations" annually. In addition to the March 5 Day of Prayer, which begins at dawn on the island of Tonga and continues for 24 hours, there are:

May Fellowship Day, the first Friday of the month. To be celebrated this year is the theme "1776-Valiant Women-1976." The Long Beach unit will meet at the Salvation Army Temple, with luncheon for about 225 women.

Church plans dedication

Lakewood Church of Christ, 6500 E. Del Amo Blvd., will dedicate a new auditorium during a special service Sunday at 2:30 p.m.

Principal speaker will be a former pastor, Rev. Robert Irby, now of the Downey-Imperial Church of Christ. Among the guests is expected to be Mayor Wayne Piercy of Lakewood.

Planned nightly at 7:30 in the church next week is a lecture series keyed to a theme, "He that has ears, let him hear." Speaking will be: Rev. Irby, Monday; Charles Allen, Huntington Park, Tuesday; Dr. Thomas Campbell, Hawthorne, Wednesday; Gene Ellmore, Gardena, Grove, Thursday; and Hugh Shira, Buena Park, Friday.

jects — crime, hunger, the aging — and our responsibilities to them.

A few of the local and national concerns shared by CWU women who volunteer time, money and talent are Meals on Wheels, Fish, Hoffman (halfway) House for women, Inner City Ministries, Long Beach Literacy Council, WICS, National Farm Workers Ministry. Along with Church World Service, American Bible Society and cooperative programs with the Long Beach Council of Churches.

As women we strive to broaden our own outlook, to be better able to share in growth toward goals of more and deeper involvement on all levels. In spite of our outward activities our deepest purpose and motive is that of service in the Kingdom of God.

In this reality is the central core of our existence, as persons and as a movement.

POSITIVE THINKING

By Norman Vincent Peale

Handling people

"How can I handle a person who dislikes me?"

This question comes from a high school boy who, obviously, is very troubled. "It makes a most embarrassing and difficult situation," he explains.

"Bill and I were formerly good friends. But he began to cool off and we drifted apart. We are in the same class, go around with the same crowd, but he hates me like nobody's business and goes out of his way to show it. What shall I do to handle him?"

A similar question came from one of the most impressive appearing women I have ever met. She was exquisitely dressed and styled in the latest fashion. I know that her home was beautiful and that she had servants, cars, money, everything she wanted. I also knew that she constantly invited people to teas, dinners, and parties and spared no expense on these functions.

Everyone who is asked goes to them.

Perhaps you associate disapproval of our present abortion laws, and speaking out on this issue, as "sexy". If so, I see a very biased individual, which is certainly a trait which has no place in any religion conscience person, especially a Christian.

With regard to the paper being dull, perhaps you had best re-read your own column of that day. However, I suggest that you do so early in the morning after a good night's rest.

I feel this article deserves not only an apology to our community and to the editors of The Tidings (who incidentally are not "reverends") but it requires clarification of just what material The Tidings has been covering which you call "Sexy".

Mrs. Regina Willett Long Beach

'Apologize!'

Religion Editor:

Normally my good intentions of writing letters regarding important issues remain just that, good intentions. I never seem to take time out between commitments in voluntary work in my community and to my family to write them. However, this week I feel absolutely compelled to take time out of what is no doubt the busiest week of my entire year to respond to your column of Saturday, February 7th. You refer to The Tidings as being "the sexiest newspaper".

In my World Book Dictionary sexy means, and I quote, "sexually appealing or stimulating, having sex appeal". I challenge you, Mr. Clutter, to produce one article in any of The Tidings publications which falls into this category, particularly in light of the connotation of the word today.

I feel your recent slams to the Catholic Church, and now our official Catholic newspaper reflect your worth as a reliable religion editor.

In North Long Beach

A half-century of service to be remembered

By RALPH HINMAN Jr.
Staff Writer

"The Lord has been good to us . . ."

In these clearly heartfelt words, Pastor George O. Peek of North Long Beach Brethren Church summed up the 50 years his large and active church has reached out into Northtown life from a still-growing facility on Orange Avenue between 60th and 61st Streets.

It is a half-century to be recalled and relived Sunday when oldtimers and newer arrivals join in celebrating a significant anniversary. Old pictures, directories and books will abound in church or patio, some of the original members hopefully will attend. It should be a time of laughter. And, perhaps, of a few tears . . .

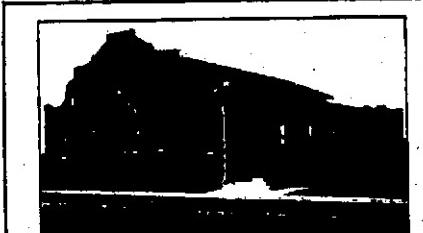

Dr. Peek, since 1948 the pastor there, recalled something of his church's history during an interview this week.

He credited, as a starting point, a "small group of people — and two men in particular — from the old First Brethren Church who felt a necessity for organizing a church" in a thinly built-up area far from Long Beach's then more heavily developed regions below Pacific Coast Highway.

"In the fall of 1925, Henry Wall, the Sunday School superintendent, and A. Harry Kirby, a member of the building development committee, came up here and bought two lots at 60th and Orange," Dr. Peek said. Kirby purchased one plot, donating it to the parent church, which simultaneously acquired bought the second lot. Total initial value of both, $8,000.

Construction of an outpost of the originating church at 5th Street and Cherry Avenue (its handsome old structure was destroyed in an arsonist-set fire in 1964), began immediately. The first unit, a sanctuary, pastor's study, kitchen and classrooms, was dedicated on Feb. 7, 1926.

GATHERED FOR the premiere then were 68 worshipers, with 60 youngsters in Sunday School attendance that first day,

PROGRAM FOR FIRST DEDICATION ON FEBRUARY 7, 1926

Nearly 100 worshipers were present for the first Sunday service a half-century past in a small, new church depicted at the top of a dedicatory program, reproduced at left. Now, 50 years later, a vastly larger congregation may join in North Long Beach Brethren Church's golden anniversary celebration, to be held Sunday in a large and handsome edifice at 61st Street and Orange Avenue.

Dr. Peek said. His predecessor, founding Pastor Ed Wilson, operated in 1926 with a $4,000 operating budget.

(By comparison, the church's budget this year is $507,000, with over 1,000 persons attending sanctuary services and 1,500 Sunday School enrollees. Where Wilson and perhaps a solitary secretary were the staff, the church now is served by 12 fulltime workers, including four ministers. Thus in a half-century.)

For two years this remained an outpost church, finally reorganizing with a charter membership of 66 into "Second Brethren Church of Long Beach" on Jan. 1, 1928. A three-story Christian Education addition later would be completed at a cost of $12,000 shortly after the stock market crash of autumn 1929 heralded a coming major economic catastrophe.

THE SECOND major addition, today's handsome sanctuary, was completed in 1958. And a new Sunday School wing was finished in September 1966.

Dr. Peek, 63, who grew up in Long Beach and was a police officer here prior to entering the ministry, obviously was proud of North Long Beach Brethren's physical accomplishments. Yet, clearly, his greatest joy was in what he called a "for real family spirit" permeating the church across the decades since its formation.

He'll talk willingly, even eagerly, about church activities in such vital fields as Christian education, youth work in general, sacred music, the ministry to senior citizens. All the multifarious activities inherent for a church ranking among its denomination's largest, that is.

Yet it is this family feeling that may well count most in his mind.

Two or three generations often are represented in today's services, he said. Yesterday's Sunday Schoolers are contemporary leaders, for "We believe in plowing back our young blood into the leadership."

Peek smiled broadly. "I've always said the way to tell how a church is growing is to see if it has fresh paint and a lot of babies around. We believe in keeping this place clean and neat — and there sure are a lot of youngsters in Sunday School!"

And I will set up one shepherd over them, and he shall feed them, even my servant David; He shall be their shepherd.

Ezekiel 34:23.

And Isaac's servants dug in the valley, and found there a well of springing water. Genesis 26:19.

Ben Peters top country song writer

NASHVILLE (T) — Ben Peters, who co-authored the award-winning song "Before the Next Tear-drop Falls," has been named Songwriter of the Year by the Nashville Songwriters Association.

Peters, a songwriter and publisher, received the association's ninth annual award for a number of songs, including "Love Put a Song in My Heart" and "All Over Me."

Peters teamed up with Vivian Keith in writing "Before the Next Tear-drop Falls," and both were honored with the association's Outstanding Achievement Award. Freddy Fender's recording of this song won the Country Music Association's 1975 "Single of the Year" award.

"I'm just flabbergasted," said Peters who started his own publishing company here about 10 years ago. "A lot of good things have happened to me in the business but nothing has ever topped this."

Other award winners and songs for which they were recognized were:

— Larry Butler and Chips Moman: "Hey Won't You Play Another Somebody Done Somebody Wrong Song."

PATTY'S TRIAL

"soldiers" William and Emily Harris would have had her killed if she tried to surrender to authorities.

"They aren't the only people running around who are like that," she said. "I've heard of other people and seen others. There were many other people who could have picked up where they left off, and if they wanted me killed, all they had to do was say it."

Browning then asked her what led her to believe that the Harrises, arrested with Miss Hearst last fall, could exercise such power.

"It's happening right now, Mr. Browning," she declared, sobbing.

"What do you mean, Miss Hearst?" Browning fired back. Then he sought to retract his question, but was overruled by the judge after Miss Hearst's attorney, F. Lee Bailey, insisted she be allowed to answer.

"San Simeon was bombed," Miss Hearst announced tearfully. "My parents received a letter threatening my life if I took the witness stand, and threatening their lives if I took the witness stand, and they wanted a quarter of a million dollars put in the Bill and Emily Harris defense fund."

Browning asked who had made this threat, and Miss Hearst said, "The New World Liberation Front."

The jury thus heard news that had been carefully cut out of their news papers eight days before.

Bailey failed earlier in the week to win permission for Miss Hearst to mention the bombing. The judge said then that current threats to the Hearst family had no relevance to the bank robbery for which she is on trial.

The explosion caused an estimated $1 million damage to a palatial guest house at the castle, erected by publishing baron William Randolph Hearst, Miss Hearst's grandfather. Security around the Hearst family was tightened after the threatening message was received by news media from the mysterious NWLF.

As the cross-examination wound up, Miss Hearst offered details about her travels with sports activist Jack Scott, whom she described as a "ripoff artist" enamored of the SLA. And she tearfully rebuffed Browning's efforts to portray her as an accomplished actress who could play any role to save her skin.

After Miss Hearst spoke of the bombing, Browning entered in evidence against her a "communique" from the NWLF, which, he said, was found in her kitchen on the day she was arrested.

"I knew there were some things from New Dawn in the apartment," she explained, referring to a Bay area radical collective which disseminates radical literature. "Jim Kilgore brought over a whole handful of things from New Dawn."

Kilgore was the house-painting partner of Steven Soliah, who shared Miss Hearst's last hideout. He is wanted on a federal warrant in connection with a bomb found and disarmed a few hours after Miss Hearst's arrest.

No arrests have been made in the San Simeon bombing, but the Chicago Tribune reported Friday that Kilgore, 29, had been seen at the castle just before the explosion. The FBI denied the report, however.

Much of the morning session of the 18th day of Miss Hearst's bank robbery trial was occupied by Browning's questions about the Scotts' role in Miss Hearst's flight from capture. He appeared particularly interested in where Scott obtained money for his travels with fugitives.

"My understanding of where he got it was that he was some kind of ripoff artist with credit cards and buying furniture on time and maneuvers like that," she said. "And he had something called the Institute for Sport and Society and he would get contributions for that."

But what was Scott's reward, Browning asked, for helping Miss Hearst flee? "He said he was going to pay for everything," she said. "What he wanted out of it was — he said he wanted a chance to struggle with the people in the SLA."

Miss Hearst, who had wept profusely throughout much of Browning's earlier questioning, regained her composure as she told of her cross-country trips with Scott and his parents.

Scott, 34, emerged as a figure in the Hearst case with the disclosure that he was under investigation by a federal grand jury in Pennsylvania for possibly harboring Miss Hearst.

He and members of his family have refused to testify before the panel, and a federal prosecutor there said that he intended to reopen the investigation with testimony from Miss Hearst after her trial.

A one-time track star at Syracuse University, Scott is the author of works critical of the sports establishment. Miss Hearst has testified that he wanted to write a book about the SLA.

It was Scott and his wife, Micki, she said Friday, who introduced her to Wendy Yoshimura, the Japanese-American artist arrested with her last Sept. 18. She reported for the first time that Scott also had provided an underground railroad service for Miss Yoshimura.

"Jack Scott had talked about her on the trip across country," she recalled. "He said he had helped her get across the country, too ... He used to know some of the people she used to know."

"There was an arrest. Her boyfriend got arrested, and he (Scott) said that that night Micki had gone to her apartment and helped clear it out, and he had taken Wendy Yoshimura to Los Angeles and had flown her across the country."

By the time the two women met at Scott's New York apartment, Miss Hearst said, she knew that the artist was a fugitive from bomb and weapons possession charges in Berkeley. Eventually, she said, Miss Yoshimura became her only friend, urging her to contact her parents while on the run.

"Did Wendy offer to help you get in touch with your parents?" Browning asked.

"Yes," Miss Hearst answered. She acknowledged, however, that she did not make the effort.

"I couldn't do it then in San Francisco," she said, citing fear of SLA "soldiers" William and Emily Harris, who were living three miles away.

"The Harrises knew where we lived," she said, "and if I'd done anything like that and if they knew that Wendy Yoshimura knew about it, they would have killed us both."

Miss Hearst denied that Scott also had urged her to contact her family several times — a report which was published earlier this year in Rolling Stone magazine. Scott, she said, never brought up the subject.

I saw two weapons in their apartment in New York," Miss Hearst testified. "Those were the same weapons they took to the farmhouse in Pennsylvania," another SLA hideout.

Browning, seeking to cast doubt on Miss Hearst's portrait of herself as unwilling bank robber and terrorized captive, elicited her admission that the SLA thought of her as a comrade.

Q. You convinced them you were with them, that you were part of them, didn't you?

A. Yes ...

Q. So to a large degree you were acting at that time, weren't you?

A. Yes ...

Q. Are you a good actress, would you say?

A. No.

Q. Are you acting now?

A. shouted objection from Miss Hearst's attorney prevented her answer, sustained by the judge, and the defendant began to grow tearful. Browning then tried to show that Miss Hearst was held by the SLA in a closet much

Hampshire Friday afternoon, after resting all week in California, to make his final push in his opening primary confrontation with the President.

His disclosure about the Cabinet offers appeared to be a matter of deft timing, coming as it did only hours after the President had left the state after two days of campaigning.

"I was quoting an economist... I didn't say I agreed with that — I wouldn't know if I agreed with that or not," he said.

"The truth of the matter is," he continued, "that it's a whole specious argument. There's nothing to invest. The money that is coming in is going out in benefit payments. The so-called trust fund is in low-yield government bonds and it's time to recognize that if you and I have a government bond, that's an IOU from the government. I've never been able to understand how the government gives itself an I-O-ME."

Reagan returned to New

FORD DRIVE

A young man rose to remind Ford that he had characterized Nixon's trip as merely another of some 10,000 to China by American private citizens. If so, the young man asked, "why was it that 18 months earlier Ford had not treated Nixon 'as any other American and have him face criminal charges in the same way as any other American would, instead of pardoning him?'

In the hush that followed the bold question, Ford repeated his contention that the only way to erase the Watergate problem from the nation's focus and concentrate on economic and diplomatic issues was to grant the pardon.

And, with a trace of asperity in his voice, Ford said:

"As far as penalty is concerned, the former President obviously resigned in disgrace. That is a pretty severe penalty. One out of 37 presidents had that happen to him."

Besides that, the judge said, any challenge to the accuracy of an FBI file must be sent to a local police force or court for possible correction. He also ordered the FBI to gradually remove all entries of non-serious offenses like drunkenness, vagrancy, traffic violations and juvenile crimes.

For the past two years individuals have been allowed to obtain copies of their FBI criminal files for a nominal fee and 2,145 persons have done that, the judge said.

He noted that nearly 70 per cent of the FBI's criminal records include at least one arrest without showing if the person was convicted or if the charge was dropped.

While the judge declined to issue a broad order sought in Tarlton's suit, he said the FBI is much more than a mechanical keeper of records.

The FBI is not merely a repository for records but is also the focal point of a vast, nationwide distribution network," Smith said in a 15-page opinion.

"An individual's arrest record — whether accurate or inaccurate — can have far-reaching social, judicial and economic consequences."

Of more immediate concern to Ford and his aides was the domestic political fallout of the Nixon trip.

The ultimate irony, suggested one member of Ford's party here, would be if Nixon, having been the one to make Ford the President, proved in the New Hampshire voting to be the one who unmade Ford's presidency.

actions taken by the executive branch."

Church added that he would support a new, "narrow" law providing criminal penalties for present or former government employees who reveal the names of U.S. intelligence agents or their methods. But that law should be restricted only to employees in the intelligence community who are required in advance to take an oath of secrecy, the senator declared.

Ford's broader approach, he said, is "a dragnet that reaches out to many thousands of executive branch employees" and tries to prevent them from disclosing "matters that ought to be made public."

Church also criticized Ford's plan to consult with a congressional oversight committee only after covert intelligence operations are underway or completed.

He said the President should let Congressional watchdogs in on secret plans "at the time of the takeoff instead of just before the crash landing, especially as most of these operations have ended in failure."

Congressional overseers could add their political judgment on undercover plans concocted by professional spies whose careers depend on mounting such ventures, regardless of long-term consequences, Church argued.

remarks were based.

"We had to get the tables over the telephone," Daly said, "and we really haven't finished evaluating them."

Daly added that of the plant's "about 600" storage tanks, 187 are "floating-roof tanks" — the type mentioned in Quinn's report. He added that the report did not allager than one she described under oath.

"Are you sure that's not the closet you were kept in?" asked the prosecutor.

"I'm absolutely positive," she said, sobbing.

Moments later, Browning again tried to show her acting ability in the bank robbery with which she is charged.

"You were pretty much acting the part of a bank robber, weren't you?" he asked.

"Yes, I guess so," said Miss Hearst.

But she clung to her contention that she was in fear of death every moment of that robbery.

L.B. rights unit wants Lowe case file made public

By DON BRACKENBURY
Staff Writer

The Long Beach Human Relations Commission wants copies of the city's report on the Jan. 1 West Long Beach shootout in which a police officer and two brothers died or the gun battle with police.

During a meeting Thursday, Human Relations Commissioner Eddie Bernard said questions had been raised about the incident but that he had not seen any copies of an official investigation report.

B. W. "Jack" O'Neil, deputy city manager and ex officio member of the commission, said the official city report has not been released because of possible litigation.

Officer Gary Elkins, 34, was killed early New Year's morning as he approached the house of Kennedy Lowe, 33, of 2816 Easy Ave. in response to reports of a prowler in the area.

Kennedy, who gunned down Elkins as the officer walked up to the door, was killed in the resulting siege and shootout, according to police.

His brother, Gene, 28, was shot by a police marksman while attempting to surrender after the shootout had ended.

Three days after the incident, Police Chief Ralph G. Kortz issued a statement admitting that Gene Lowe was mistakenly shot while trying to surrender.

Kortz called his death regrettable, but said there would be no disciplinary action taken against the officer who shot him because the marksman believed the younger Lowe was trying to escape. It later was determined that Gene had nothing to do with Elkins'

Copies of the report would be available to commissioners as soon as the litigation is settled, O'Neil said.

Commissioner Rudy Moreno said he felt the commission should let the public know that it will be monitoring the matter, commenting that "the community wants reassurance there will be no whitewash."

"I think we can give assurance to the community that when we get the report, we will study it and see if there is any area we feel needs further investigation," said commission Chairman Gene Hoffman.

Rev. John E. Clement, 3260 Chestnut Ave., said he felt the commissioners should be sitting in on investigations into the shooting.

He suggested that it ask one of its subcommittees to review the ordinance which created the Human Relations Commission to see if commission powers might not be expanded.

Bus-line extensions to improve service

Seven route extensions on lines of the Long Beach Public Transportation Co. are scheduled to take effect Sunday as part of a joint program with the Southern California Rapid Transit District to improve bus service to the north of the city.

The changes involve the Mid-Cities Transit Plan, which was worked out by the RTD and various local transit lines, including Long Beach. The plan seeks to eliminate duplication of services and connect local lines to the RTD systems.

THE RTD, said William F. Farrell, general manager of the Long Beach Public Transportation Company, has created cross-town service on Artesia Boulevard, Alondra Boulevard, Compton Boulevard and Rosecrans Avenue, and also extended its north-south lines to the south.

The Long Beach bus lines basically will be extended north and east to connect to the RTD lines and also to link more areas with downtown Long Beach and with other shopping centers, Farrell said.

He said the changes have been in the planning stage for nearly a year, and have been approved by the Long Beach bus company's board of directors, the Citizens Advisory Transportation Committee of Long Beach and the city's Bureau of Franchises.

The changes are:

—Route No. 1-Studebaker Road is to be extended east from the Navy Hospital on Carson Street to Norwalk Boulevard, where it will service a new section of Long Beach, instead of using a narrow residential street on Pioneer Boulevard.

—Route No. 2-Cherry Avenue will be extended north to Alondra Boulevard to make connection with the RTD's new cross-town line on Alondra.

—Route No. 2 which operates on Downey Boulevard also is to be extended north to connect to the RTD's Alondra cross-town line.

—Route No. 7-Orange Avenue will be extended north from 71st Street to Rosecrans Avenue to connect with the RTD's cross-town line along that street.

—Route No. 9-Woodruff Avenue will be extended north from Ashworth Street to the RTD's Alondra cross-town line.

—Route No. 15, the Long Beach bus company's cross-town line on Del Amo Boulevard, will be extended into the Lakewood Shopping Center so that passengers will not have to walk across Del Amo Boulevard to get to the center.

Under study, Farrell said, is a new service from downtown Long Beach to the new California State University and Colleges headquarters building at the foot of Golden Shore. The building currently is under construction.

Farell said the Long Beach bus system now operates 5.5 million miles a year. The new extensions will increase this to 6.3 million miles annually, he added.

American folklore festival slated for Feb. 28 at LBSU

An American Folklore Festival, featuring activities ranging from international folk dancing to talks by folklore experts, will be held at Long Beach State University Feb. 28.

Among the performers will be Shony Alex Braun, gypsy violinist, and the Ballet Folklorico of Poly High School.

Alan Dundes of UC Berkeley, author of "Urban Folklore from the Paperwork Empire," will speak on "Folklore in the Modern World." Sam Hinton, a folksinger since vaudeville times and now a UC San Diego professor, is also on the day's agenda.

At 7 p.m., Charles Galt and the LBSU international folk dance club will give demonstrations and instruction in folk dances from several lands. There'll be folk dancing for everyone at 8 p.m.

The day-long festival is sponsored by the college's comparative literature department and the Long Beach Folk Life Center.

The day's activities will begin with a hospitality hour at 9 a.m. Dundes will speak at 9:30 a.m. and Hinton at 10 a.m.

Braun will perform at 11:30 a.m. Ethnic food will be served in the cafeteria afterwards.

Folk performances and workshops will fill the afternoon. Presentations range from a martial arts demonstration to a talk on barrio art.

Further information can be obtained from the college's comparative literature department.

EMBRÖDEN WORKS ON GLASS-FIBER HULL AT HIS LONG BEACH WORKSHOP

L.B. boyhood dream may come true—best land yacht ever built

By DICK EMERY
Staff Writer

Nord Embroden, at age 8, put a sabot sailboat on a cart with wheels, tied it down and then sailed it on the wide sand beach in front of his home on 67th Place on the Alamitos Bay Peninsula.

A sabot is midget-sized, and all the kids on the Peninsula sailed sabots, but Nord was the only kid with a land-travelling sailboat. For keeping their eyes peeled for lifeguards leery of the fast-sailing craft on the dry beach, envious kids got rides.

The wheeled vessel became a great success, and all the while he sailed it, Nord noted areas for functional improvements.

He noted, for example, that his wheeled sabot bumped and rattled on sand ripples and turned cranky under a gust of wind.

"I had that first one a long time," Nord Embroden—that's a Danish name—said a day or two ago in his Long Beach workshop.

"When I was 13 I built a land sailer 6 feet long and 4 feet wide, with trailer wheels, and I sailed it on the beach.

"She was a great success, too, but I felt I could design and build a better one. I wanted a real land yacht like the ones I was reading about in Belgium, England, France and Germany."

Nord studied industrial arts at Wilson High and City College, and in 1973 he was graduated from Long Beach State in design and electronics and opened his shop at 1217 Loma Ave. as a designer of industrial products.

Belmont Shore

Buildings alter fire protection plans

By ROBERT GORE
Staff Writer

The new Marina Pacifica condominium project and two new shopping centers east of Pacific Coast Highway have changed fire protection plans for the Belmont Shore area, according to Fire Chief Virgil Jones.

Because of the height of the condominiums, an aerial ladder truck with a 100-foot reach will be added for the shore, Jones said.

In order to further improve the fire protection and to accommodate the $85,000 truck, a new $350,000 station will be built west of Marina Drive at Yacht Basin 3, immediately south of Marina Pacifica.

A pumper truck and a fire boat, transferred from other stations, will join the new truck, Jones said.

When police officers are called to testify on their off-duty time, the city pays them at time-and-a-half, he said. If they are called during duty hours, they are paid at the regular salary, but they are not available for patrol duties.

Mansell emphasized that his complaint is not that police officers are called to testify, but that they are forced to sit around for hours outside the courtroom until the attorneys are ready to call them to the witness stand.

Particularly irritating, he said, is when an officer is called as a witness, spends hours at the courtroom, and, for various reasons, never does testify.

During December, he reported, 235 officers were called as witnesses, but 127 of them never got to testify. In January, the courts called 262 officers, but 154 did not get onto the witness stand.

Illegal parkers have blocked streets, alleys, driveways and other crucial entrances, Jones noted.

Although the houses present no height problem, they are located close together, which allows fire to jump from roof-to-roof, Jones said.

The fireboats move up the canals to fight fires on Treasure Island, he said.

An experimental $270,000 fireboat is being tested in the marina, Jones said. There are some problems with the boat, he acknowledged, but he expects they will be corrected.

Congress last year to support legal assistance programs to the poor.

If the county wants to keep on shilly-shallying about this, it should pick up this cost from the cities."

Time wasted in court said to cost taxpayers $600,000 in police pay

It costs Long Beach taxpayers about $600,000 a year in overtime for police officers called to testify in court, because they spend hours awaiting their turn and some never get to the witness stand at all, City Manager John R. Mansell said Friday.

For all of the cities in Los Angeles County combined, this cost probably runs several million dollars a year, Mansell said.

"Government at present is in a precarious financial position," he said. "To have this abuse of the courts continue is utterly ridiculous."

Mansell said it's time for judges, prosecutors and defense attorneys to get together and stop the wasted time of police officers and the unnecessary cost to cities.

"If the county wants to keep on shilly-shallying about this, it should pick up this cost from the cities."

The Legal Aid Foundation of Long Beach has received a $351,875 federal grant, assuring salaries for about half its regular staff of attorneys, local officials have announced.

Rollback to 10c-mail rate eyed

WASHINGTON (AP)—Three federal judges Friday began considering whether to order a temporary rollback in the cost of mailing a letter from 13 to 10 cents.

Judge Spottswood W. Robinson III said the temporary rollback, if granted, "could create a good deal of confusion in this country."

Robinson said the postal service, under the complicated rate-making procedures, could restore the present rates by around March 18.

Justice Department attorney Ronald R. Glanz, representing the postal service, agreed with the judge. "It would be intolerable to go back to the 10-cent stamp for less than 30 days," he said.

THE SUIT was brought by the Associated Third Class Mailers, whose members are spending millions of dollars extra in postal rates at the higher level.

J. Edward Day, attorney for the third-class mailers, argued that the board of governors of the postal service did not comply with all technical requirements of the law in raising the rates.

The postal service filed for the higher rates Sept. 18 and put them into effect on a temporary basis Dec. 31.

The financially troubled agency contends it would lose $7 million a day under any rollback. It also had said that it might not be able to meet its payroll if rates are lowered.

The court also heard arguments by the National Association of Greeting Card Publishers that the 10-cent rate was improperly made permanent last September.

Matthew S. Perlman, representing the publishers, said the postal service overcharges the first-class-mail user in order to subsidize business mailers.

PERLMAN said the first-class rate should have been set at 8½ cents while second, third and fourth-class rates should have been increased substantially.

"The postal service is transferring income from the individual consumer to the business users of the mail," he said.

Postal service attorney Jim Finch disputed this, saying the agency "is not out to do in the first-class mailers and benefit everyone else."

The judges did not say when they would issue their opinion, but a court official indicated it probably would be more than a week away.

Trio charged in 1957 Alabama Klan slaying

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)—Three Montgomery men were charged Friday with first-degree murder in connection with the 1957 Ku Klux Klan slaying of a 25-year-old black truck driver, State Atty. Gen. Bill Baxley announced.

The arrests resulted "indirectly from work on the Birmingham church bombing," said Baxley, referring to a 1963 bombing in which four young black girls were killed.

Baxley said the slain truck driver, Willie Edwards Jr. of Montgomery, was driving a supermarket truck back to Montgomery on the night of Jan. 23, 1957, "when a carload of Ku Klux Klansmen stopped him."

EDWARDS' body was recovered from the Alabama River in Lowndes County three months later, said Baxley, adding that the cause of death was drowning.

The attorney general identified the three men as William "Sonny" Kyle Livingston, 38, a bail bondsman; James York, 73, a retired city sanitation worker, and Henry Alexander, 46, a plumbing contractor.

There is no statute of limitations on first-degree murder in Alabama.

The three, who were arrested by state troopers Friday, were held without bail pending arraignment in Circuit Court.

ALL THREE had been indicted in connection with racial violence that flared in Montgomery in January 1957, following the U.S. Supreme Court decision integrating the Montgomery city bus system. Prior to that decision, the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. had led a year-long boycott of city buses, an action that launched the Birmingham church bombing, he said both were "Klan-related."

"Another driver had earlier...smiled at white woman, so they were laying for him," Baxley said of Edwards' assailants. "It was his first day on the job."

Although Baxley indicated there was no "direct connection" between Friday's arrests and the Birmingham church bombing, he said both were "Klan-related."

"We've been working on several unsolved civil rights murders for a number of years," Baxley told reporters in his office, saying Friday's arrests should serve as a warning to those involved in the Birmingham bombing.

Man charged with trying to 'pull plug' on patient

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP)—A young man was charged Friday with assault for allegedly trying to turn off the life-support system of a woman who had been in a coma at the University of Kentucky Medical Center for four months, police said.

James Vanover, 22, who said he was from Ypsilanti, Mich., was charged with first-degree assault for allegedly trying to turn off the machinery that keeps Pam Strohl, 29, alive.

Tom Padgett, the university's director of public safety, said "someone allegedly altered the life-support system" of Mrs. Strohl. "Hospital monitors detected the alteration in sufficient time to prevent any apparent change in the patient's status."

Information on Vanover's background was sketchy. Police and university officials refused to discuss details.

Mrs. Strohl went into a coma last October from viral encephalitis and has never regained consciousness, hospital officials said. Her husband, Dr. Kingman Strohl, is a resident physician at the hospital.

Vanover was being held without bail in the Fayette County Jail.

"To be perfectly honest, I don't remember what happened," he said in an interview at the jail.

Although Vanover described himself as an itinerant who has lived in several cities, he said he had known Mrs. Strohl for five years.

"We've always been good friends," Vanover said. "We could always call one another and cry on each other's shoulders if we had to."

He said he visited Mrs. Strohl in the hospital "every day and sometimes twice a day."

GARDENING

By JOE LITTLEFIELD

Philodendrons stuck in a dark corner near a window will turn their leaves towards the sunlight. They also present an interesting contrast with when planted near smaller leaf plants in a garden.

There's a certain knack in knowing when indoor plants need watering—the proper amount of water, and frequency of watering.

A friend wondered why the lower leaves of her indoor rubber plant continued to yellow and drop off. She faithfully gave that large plant only one glass of water a week!

She never realized the poor plant was thirsting to death.

We suggested she fill the pot—the space between the top of soil and top of pot—three or four times and call it one drink of water. As soon as the first amount of water has soaked through the soil, she should do it again two or three times. That way, she would be sure the entire root ball was thoroughly soaked.

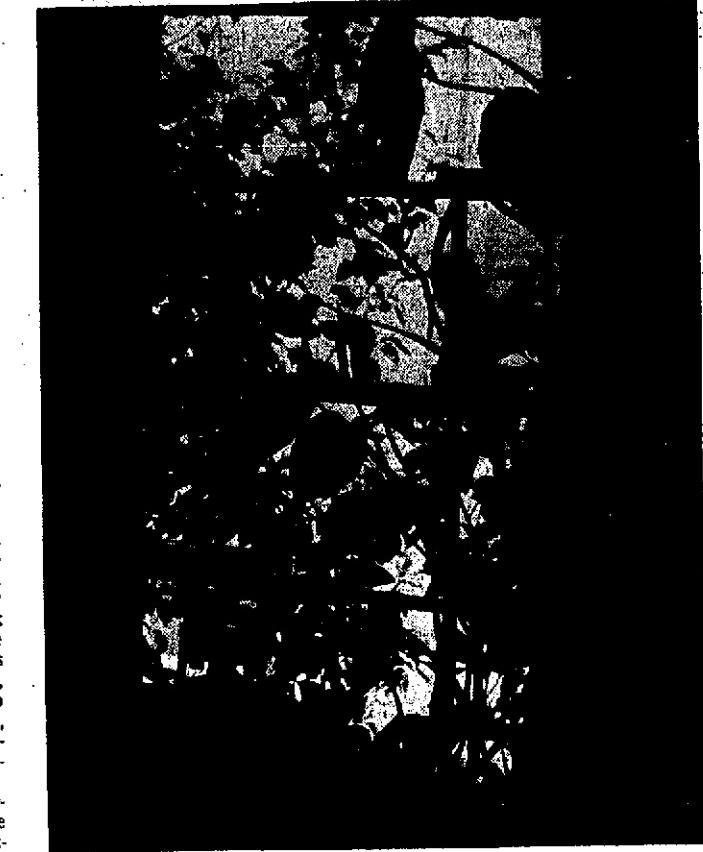

After this type of watering, it is best to empty the saucer or jardiniere so excess water won't keep the bottom of the pot damp, stagnant, and possibly cause a water mold to develop on the roots.

INSTEAD of watering once a week, (same day of each week) she should finger-test the soil for moisture.

Livingston was acquitted on a charge of bombing one of the churches; the charges against York and Alexander, who were indicted for the Abernathy bombing, were then dropped.

Although Baxley indicated there was no "direct connection" between Friday's arrests and the Birmingham church bombing, he said both were "Klan-related."

"We've been working on several unsolved civil rights murders for a number of years," Baxley told reporters in his office, saying Friday's arrests should serve as a warning to those involved in the Birmingham bombing.

PHILODENDRON . . . looking for sun rather the fault of a careless worker.

Gardeners shouldn't assume their newly purchased house plants are properly planted. Many times they are not. The gardener should check the plants before taking them home.

The top of a root ball that isn't visible or level with the surrounding soil indicates that the plant is set too deep into the soil.

Sometimes a gardener impulsively purchases an indoor plant and after a short time wonders what's wrong with it.

There can be several problems. For example, the plant might be too loosely planted, or the top of the plant's root ball is covered by a special mix which the grower used.

It probably is not the nurseryman's fault, but tended first. The mix also should be pre-moistened before adding it to the rest in the pot.

LEAVES

should be inspected for possible pests.

I had an unusual experience with a man who brought in several messy looking leaves from Tolmiea, a piggy-back plant, while I was doing a garden clinic.

The leaves were horribly infested by spider mites. The infested plant was in his car. It was carefully inspected by my magnifying glass.

I suggested he take it back to the nursery. It cost about $15 and was a gift from a friend. He felt embarrassed to tell his friend the plant was buggy, because it came from a fine florist shop.

I told him his friend would be more embarrassed to learn about the plant's problem and would happily return it to the florist to be replaced by a "clean" plant.

Convict-mother fights to get tot into prison

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Convict-mother Frances intended the state to be law to allow her to have her infant son with her.

San Francisco Superior Court Judge John Benson took the matter under submission after hearing arguments in the class action suit from the state and their attorneys for Barbara Cardell, 20, an inmate at the California

Institution for Women since last May.

She had asked the court to order prison officials and the state Health and Welfare Agency to let the child, born last Dec. 24, live with her.

Attorneys Patti Roberts and Pauline Tesler told the judge that the state penal code section providing that incarcerated mothers may have their infants with them until the child reaches the age of 2 is mandatory.

Deputy Atty. Gen. Harriet Wissbrach countered that the 1929 law is permissive and declared that research still under way showed that in the 47 years it has been on the books "only three mothers have requested their children remain with them in prison."

She said there was no indication any such request had been approved.

In the present case, she contended, administrative remedies had not been exhausted because no request had been made to the Women's Board of Terms and Parole.

The inmate's lawyers contend — and the state denied — that there was nothing in evidence to substantiate the reasons the prison superintendent offered for refusing to allow her to have the child with her and thus there had been an abuse of discretion.

The superintendent had said a prison is not a proper place for a child, that it would be dangerous at the time because of riots at the institution and that to have children there would be a disruptive force affecting security and safety.

Bartender 'guilty' in wife death

SANTA ROSA (AP) — A jury convicted a Marysville bartender Friday of first-degree murder in the throat-slashing of his estranged wife a year ago.

The defendant, Cory Emmett Schroeder, 30, listened impassively to the verdict, but his mother burst into tears during a polling of the jury and was comforted by her husband, Jack Schroeder.

Sonoma County Superior Court Judge Richard Hoenig ordered a probation office investigation and report and set sentencing for March 5.

Defense attorney A. J. Carrion said he would file a notice of appeal.

The jurors got the case Thursday afternoon, recessed overnight after deliberating about 1½ hours and deliberated another 1½ hours Friday before arriving at a verdict.

On Friday morning the jurors asked to review testimony of five witnesses, including Schroeder, and also asked the judge to repeat instructions on the distinction between first and second-degree murder.

The trial, which began Feb. 3, was moved here from Yuba County on a change of venue.

On the witness stand, Schroeder denied that he killed his estranged wife, Terri Michelle, 23, who had filed for divorce three months before her body was found in an alley near the Marysville police station last Feb. 26. Schroeder said he had spent that night drinking at taverns in the area.

Mrs. Schroeder was killed shortly after she left her job as a cocktail waitress at a Marysville bar. There were no witnesses and no murder weapon was found.

Moreover, Moss said, "I feel your comments are highly inaccurate and an example of selective, out-of-context manipulations that are unworthy of any trade association, let alone one representing an old and highly respected profession."

Sammons said the AMA rejected the "simplistic thinking and unscientific methodology and distortion of testimony evident throughout the report."

Incarcerated youths increase during '75

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Admissions to state institutions for youthful offenders jumped 13.5 per cent last year, the California Youth Authority said Friday.

The CYA said 3,402 persons were placed in its institutions during 1975, compared with 3,002 in 1974. It was the third straight year of increase.

But admissions were well below the record of 6,190 in 1965, before the start of a new policy shifting many offenders to local programs, the CYA said.

IT ALSO said institutional population increased 3.5 per cent, from 4,431 to 4,587.

The average length of stay increased from 12.4 to 12.7 months for the 4,360 males and from 11.6 to 12.2 months for the 227 females.

However, the CYA's total number of wards — inmates plus parolees — declined by 3.5 per cent because of a 7.3 per cent drop in the parole case load.

The CYA said it had 7,963 parolees at the end of 1975, compared with 8,586 a year earlier.

Another decrease was in the number of parole violators returning to institutions, a 12 per cent drop from 1,615 to 1,415.

Doctor's murder case still pending

By JOANNE NORRIS
Staff Writer

Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald of Long Beach still faces the possibility of a government appeal or a request for a rehearing in the Jan. 24 dismissal of murder charges against him, and he may have up to 60 more days to ponder his fate.

MacDonald, head of emergency services for St. Mary Medical Center, had been charged with the 1970 murder of his wife and two small daughters at Ft. Bragg, N.C.

But indictments were ordered dismissed by the U.S. Fourth District Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., on grounds he had been denied a speedy trial.

MacDonald said Friday that alleged threats against him made by his wife's stepfather, Alfred Kassab of Long Island, haven't been carried out.

He said his attorney, Bernard Segal of San Francisco, has contacted the FBI, other Justice Department officials and the New York police about Kassab's statements. Segal has asked that Kassab's gun permit be taken away, but MacDonald said authorities won't say whether it has been.

Kassab, who sought reopening of the case after MacDonald had been cleared of charges earlier following a military inquiry, said when the charges were dismissed last month he would "administer justice" himself.

In a telephone interview at the time of the dismissals, Kassab said, "If they (federal prosecutors) don't act and act fast, I am going to take things into my own hands. If they don't do something, I'm going to administer justice myself."

MacDonald explained that the government has been granted a 15-day extension of its 30-day time limit to request that the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals review its findings. It can ask that the same three judges or the whole circuit panel of seven judges take another look at the dismissal order. MacDonald said his attorney thinks this will be unlikely.

However, the government also has 60 days from the dismissal date to appeal the action to the U.S. Supreme Court and can request a 30-day extension of this time

Brown gave felons Christmas pardons

By DOUG WILLIS

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Brown issued pardons to 19 ex-felons last Christmas Eve, a report issued by the governor's office says.

Throughout his first full year in office, the Democratic governor issued only one other pardon, an Aug. 22 pardon to a man convicted 19 years earlier of two counts of writing fictitious checks.

Brown's Christmas Eve pardons, which have not been previously announced, marked a return to a tradition established by his father, former Gov. "Pat" Brown, who saved up pardons each year for Christmas Eve announcements.

RONALD Reagan, who succeeded the senior Brown in 1967, abandoned the practice of publicly announcing pardons, and he spaced them out with other routine business throughout the year.

"WE DIDN'T sit down and decide Christmas Eve would be the date. We had been working on them for some time, and the governor had time then. I'm not sure we'll do it again that way," she said.

She said no pardons have been signed by Brown since Dec. 24, although one issued at that time was not completed until this year due to legal requirements.

None of the 20 who received pardons last year had been involved in highly publicized offenses. Most involved burglary, drug use and check cashing.

All had been out of jail for a number of years with no record whose employer knew about his 1963 California burglary conviction.

All had applied for pardons, which restore voting and other civil rights.

Brown also has the right to commute prison terms, an authority he has not yet exercised. Reagan commuted 17 sentences in eight years.

Mrs. Lytle also said it was not entirely deliberate that the pardons were issued on Christmas week.

"The responses were often very emotional. One man said, 'Excuse me but I'm going to cry,'" she said.

She said no pardons have been signed by Brown since Dec. 24, although one issued at that time was not completed until this year due to legal requirements.

YOUR HOROSCOPE
by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Sunday

Your birthday today: Gives you a provocative peak at the future. It's a year of many adjustments, swiftly developing emotional ties and a vocational challenge. To prepare yourself, either go back to school or use your daily experience for ongoing study. Today's natives have values that cause them to reject much that others seek to own.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Renew your contacts. Get in a way that builds your reputation and contributes to the well-being of your own people. You benefit from making home repairs.

Taurus (April 20-May 18): You're able to deal with the necessary chores and amenities but have to prepare for some surprises. Be alert to profit from the changes.

Gemini (May 19-June 16): You and your friends can improve matters this Sunday. If you must work, do a good job without grumbling, then make sure to get credit for it.

Cancer (June 17-July 22): Family affairs prompt a long, inconclusive discussion. When you speak up, be direct to avoid a misunderstanding. Get out on an excursion if feasible.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Now that you have a schedule changes to make, use the opportunity to break bad habits and move toward a pattern that protects your health.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your personal concerns have repercussions in other places. Catch up on correspondence and share your information where it does the most good.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Capitalize on any chance to add to your resources and collect what is due you. You may have to substitute for someone who can't manage usual routines.

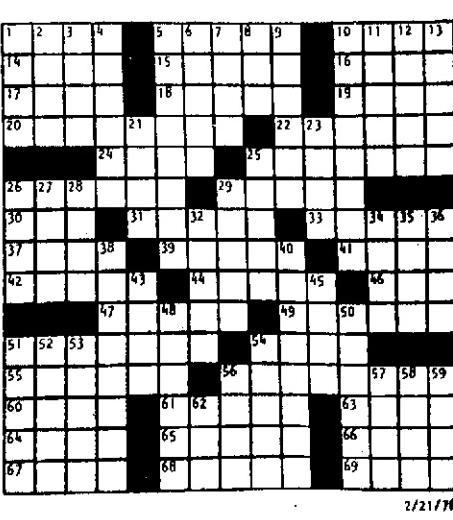

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Do what is expected of you in a way that builds your reputation and contributes to the well-being of your own people. You benefit from making home repairs.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You're free to pursue just about any course. Get in some socializing and travel. Enjoy sightseeing and entertainment today.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your imagination is powerful today and gives you important insight into vexing problems. Little matters may be turning points.

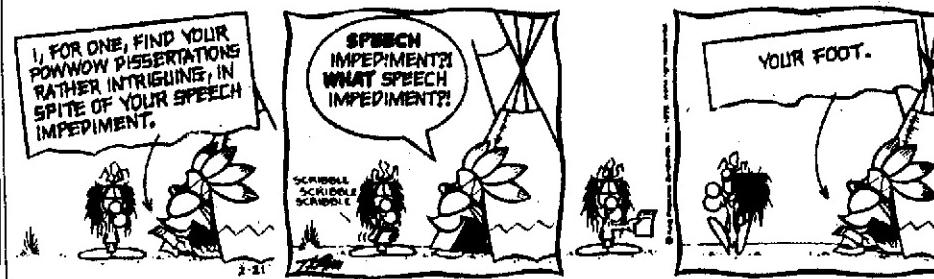

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Increase your influence and earning power by making an extra effort. Gather people of similar interests and make those special contacts.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Concentrate on normal Sunday observances. In later hours concentrate on work and family concerns. Your appeal is strong.

New program for depressed areas launched

B of A signs low-cost loans on housing in 3 cities

By BOB ANDREW
Staff Writer

The Bank of America has signed contracts with Torrance and two other California cities to process low-cost loans supported by federal fund grants for the rehabilitation of residential property in deteriorating areas.

"You really have to give B of A credit because they were the only ones who were willing to work with us on this," commented William Kowalli, the Torrance deputy city attorney assigned to oversee that city's contract.

When the federal program was first proposed under terms of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (HCD), Kowalli said this week, Torrance approached 30 leading institutions asking for proposals for a low-cost loan program.

"We got no response at first. I mean nothing — period. Then B of A came up with this offer," Kowalli said.

For the Torrance program, the loans are restricted to rehabilitation projects for owner-occupied residential properties within a specific target area — basically the old downtown area dating from the city's incorporation more than 50 years ago.

"There are already 20 applications in the file but the actual issuing of loans hasn't started yet," reported Alex Romvari, the planning assistant administering the program.

Of the applicants so far only about half qualify because of the federal guidelines on income, Romvari explained. Those income standards are graduated in proportion to the number of dependents in the family and could range as high as $20,000 a year for a family with eight children, he said.

"Before the first loan is issued," Romvari said, "we will set up a priority list starting with the lowest income and going up. Then we will make loans as long as the money lasts. We have $250,000 available this year and we would like to begin getting it to work."

Under the Torrance contract, Kowalli said, the loans will be at 3.75 per cent simple interest.

"The bank will conduct the standard credit check and give the application the same hard look as any loan request," Kowalli said.

If the loan is approved the city will deposit the face value of the loan in a non-interest bearing account. As the borrower pays off the principal, the city's federal funds will be returned to an interest-paying account until they are rolled over into a new loan.

The contract does have a provision for the city to require a loan to be issued even in a case when the bank would normally reject the application.

"In those cases," Kowalli said, "the loan is then immediately sold directly to the city and we become, in effect, the mortgage holder."

The only time there is any charge by the bank for paper work in the credit check process is when the city buys the loan and then it is a standard fee of $75.

The other two cities involved in the program with Bank of America are San Diego and Menlo Park, and other cities are now studying the program, according to Kyhl S. Smeby, a senior vice president of the bank's region.

Contracts with other cities may vary from the Torrance program because each is carefully tailored to community needs.

Smeby announced this week that the overall program conceived by the bank's Social Policy Department provides for rehabilitation of both residential and commercial properties, purchase of older homes, construction of low-cost and senior citizen housing, improvement of downtown areas and acquisition of park and recreation facilities.

L.B.'s Adm. Wilkinson takes directorship in industry

Vice Adm. Eugene (Dennis) P. Wilkinson, USN (ret.), a third-generation native of Long Beach, has been elected to the board of directors of Data-Design Laboratories, a diversified engineering services and electronics company.

He was the first commanding officer of the nation's first nuclear-powered submarine, the USS Nautilus, and the first commander of the nation's first nuclear-powered surface ship, the USS Long Beach. He also was executive officer of the submarine Cusk, the first submarine to fire guided missiles.

It is anticipated Wilkinson will lend his expertise in a number of Data-Design's high-technology businesses and in other areas the company is likely to enter.

Wilkinson, 57, was commissioned in 1940 and his career spanned several important assignments, many of which were U.S. Navy pioneer programs. He put in 3½ years with the USS Nautilus and four years with the USS Long Beach.

During World War II, Wilkinson participated in eight submarine war patrols, earning the Silver Star medal and the Navy Unit commendation. He had command of more than 100 ships and 25,000 officers and men. His last Navy assignment was as deputy chief of Naval operations for submarine warfare, where he administered approximately 20 per cent of the total Navy budget.

He was awarded two gold stars in lieu of second and third awards of the Distinguished Service Medal for performance in his last two Navy positions.

In June 1969, Wilkinson assumed command of Submarine Flotilla Two and in February of the following year was in command of the Submarine Force, U.S. Atlantic Fleet, where he had command of more than 100 ships and 25,000 officers and men. His last Navy assignment was as deputy chief of Naval operations for submarine warfare, where he administered approximately 20 per cent of the total Navy budget.

Wilkinson's election to the Data-Design board fills a vacancy caused by the recent resignation of Paul Sampson as president and director of Data-Design. His duties as president have been assumed by Thomas C. Beiseker, chairman of the board of Data-Design and chief executive officer.

Two big auctions slated

Crowds of bidders are expected when the nationwide auction of REA equipment and furniture comes to Southern California Friday and Saturday.

Trucks, materials-handling systems, tools, desks and safes are among thousands of items to go on the block as part of the nation's largest bankruptcy sale. Daylong auctions will start at 9:30 a.m. at 357 Aliso St. in Los Angeles, Friday, and at 3216 Westminster Ave. in Santa Ana, Saturday.

The depots are open to public inspection for three working days prior to each auction. Catalogues of items to be sold are available free on each site.

The 136-year-old REA, once the world's largest surface transportation system, was declared bankrupt Nov. 6.

By RICHARD HOWLAND
Staff Writer

The downtown Long Beach Associates board of directors voted unanimously this week to oppose a bill in the state senate that would implement the current provisions of the California Coastal Plan.

The board objected to the coastal plan's lack of recognition of property owner considerations as well as the creation of a state commission with unlimited discriminatory authority.

The plan is not consistent with the principles of representative government because members of the regulating commission would be appointed, the board concluded.

The board also made the following objections:

—The plan would not serve as a guideline because it would have the full force of law;

—The state commission would have veto power over energy facilities, public works projects and developments which could affect use of water, land, air space or other coastal resources;

—No agricultural land larger than 20 acres could be converted to non-agricultural use;

—There would be no balance on the commission because all members are to be of "demonstrated ability and commitment to carry out the coastal plan";

—Once passed by the Legislature, amendments to the bill could be made without further recourse to the Legislature;

Industry Week

Diesels due in U.S. in 1977

CLEVELAND — U.S.-built diesel engines will be available to American drivers during 1977 in passenger cars or light duty trucks or both, Industry Week reports.

Machine tools being ordered by the Oldsmobile Division of General Motors Corp. will enable production of a 280-cubic-inch V8 diesel suitable for use in either mid-size cars or the new smaller full-size cars slated for introduction next fall. And a new Volkswagen diesel design is based on the basic Audi engine soon to be built by American Motors Corp. and for which Chrysler Corp. is now negotiating.

But whether the new diesel engines will be used for passenger cars or be limited to light duty trucks and motor homes with less stringent exhaust emission requirements depends upon Congress, the magazine for managers notes.

Next year, present U.S. emission standards require a tightening in the allowable oxides of nitrogen emissions from the present 2 grams per mile to 0.4 grams per mile. While the new diesels meet current requirements, they don't meet the tighter 1977 standard.

FOLLOWING A REPORT BY the National Academy of Sciences and agreement by the Environmental Protection Agency that the more strict oxides of nitrogen standard would not significantly improve the environment and would be expensive to achieve, the administration backs an easing of the rule. But, thus far, Congress has not acted to lower the requirement, explains Industry Week.

Hoping for the passenger car market but backed with assured alternative uses, Oldsmobile has moved ahead with others to several suppliers for tooling and equipment for its new diesel. Several components, however, including the block, are shared with the venerable GM 350-cubic-inch V8 gasoline engine.

A SIMILAR APPROACH is being followed by Volkswagenwerk AG with its diesel design sharing many components with the Audi series B engine. In fact, the cast iron block comes from the gasoline version with only minor bolt-on changes, reports the magazine for managers.

Why the diesel interest? Perhaps most importantly, diesels give exceptional fuel economy, especially in stop-and-go driving. They use a presently somewhat less expensive fuel, require little maintenance, and seem to run forever.

Currently, only two manufacturers — Mercedes-Benz and Peugeot — offer passenger car diesels in this country. Both report they are selling as fast as they can be produced.

Business Week

VW reportedly picks U.S. site

NEW YORK — Business Week magazine reports Toni Schmucker, chief executive of Volkswagenwerk, has already decided which of three sites he prefers for manufacturing autos in the United States.

The three candidates are a federally owned former tank manufacturing plant in Brook Park, Ohio, near Cleveland; a never-used Chrysler Corp. facility in New Stanton, Pa., outside Pittsburgh; and Chrysler's old Jefferson Avenue Detroit plant.

Schmucker has not yet made his choice public but once he makes his decision it will take an estimated 12 months for the first U.S.-made "Rabbit" to roll off the plant assembly line. Eighteen months is thought to be needed for full production.

The new operation will result in 5,000 to 6,000 new jobs within the next two years.

THE AUTO maker's move is seen as an effort to reverse the devastating decline in VW's U.S. market share from 6.1 per cent of all cars sold in 1970 to just 3.3 per cent last year. Schmucker has seen VW exports to America drop by more than 50 per cent to 276,000 last year and thinks that, without the U.S. factory, VW sales in America could drop to just 50,000 by 1980.

Business Week said that other foreign automakers are eyeing the VW decision. While Fiat and Renault claim they have no plans now to emulate Volkswagen, Susumu Yanagisawa, manager of the North American sector of Toyota Motor Sales Co., said: "We are looking very closely at what Volkswagen is going to do."

IF AND WHEN VW starts turning out cars like rabbits here, the "biggest question," Business Week said, is how much VW can chop off the $3,499 sales price of the vehicle in the United States by the new plant. "With statewide assembly, VW thinks it could shave the Rabbit's price by about 10 per cent. At $3,450 it would be more competitive with the Dodge Colt, although still higher than Toyota's Corolla and Honda's Civic CVCC."

Schmucker said that "If the management board is convinced that we should go to the U.S. because the economics and details are right, the supervisory board (including representatives of labor) is going to approve." He concedes that scrapping the plan now would irreparably harm VW's 1,200 U.S. dealers.

First 'superstar' episode
bum rap for new TV cop

By JAY SHARPUTT

NEW YORK — The last of the 12 mid-season replacement series is premiering Saturday on ABC, (Channel 2 at 10 p.m.). It's called "Bert D'Angelo-Superstar" and will be the 22nd cop or private-eye series facing us at night now.

The cop, played by Paul Sorvino, a fine actor, is trapped in the title role of this caper about a New York cop who goes West, joins the San Francisco police force for unexplained reasons and commences fighting crime.

ABC describes the show as "a fast-moving series about a tough San Francisco police detective who may bend and twist the rules on occasion to make an arrest."

HE should have bent and twisted the author of Saturday's opener, a wandering yarn about a fellow cop from New York who, in the course of visiting the City by the Bay, bumps off a damsel who seems to be his wife.

The cop, played by George Dzundza, first calls Sorvino from the hotel, the cop's wife says hello in the phone, and all hands agree to meet for broadcast the next morning.

"Hey, take care of your person," Sorvino says before hanging up. But that night, the gendarme instead takes care of his wife's person, adjusting her scarf in such a manner as to make her expire right there on Telegraph Hill.

THE foul deed is observed by a drug dealer lurking nearby. He later tracks down the officer and puts the bite on him for $15,000.

Prior to that, the cop has told Sorvino his wife is AWOL and seeks help finding her. No sweat, Sorvino says: "I'll have this out on the street and I'll have her back to you in no time at all."

Well, sir, that seems to take forever. But during forever, the bad cop fatally stabs his blackmailer, the body of a woman is found on Telegraph Hill and is identified as a New York call girl.

By a process too laborious to describe, Sorvino starts thinking. He's thinking that the dead woman was brought to San Francisco by his pal, who passed her off on the phone as his wife.

Danged if I can recall why he did this or why he killed her — although those who persevere may find out by hiring a plot detective — but Sorvino suspects his pal also may have done in his real wife back in Fun City.

WHEN he unloads his suspicion on his pal, the pal growls, "Arrest me, then. Read me my rights and try to make it stick!"

If you don't get the point of this discourse, the baddie emphasizes it again to Sorvino, saying, "Go grab a rubber room, mister. Arrest me or get out of my life."

"Superstar" may improve in coming episodes, but Saturday's premiere show is a superdud, and San Francisco should demand a recount.

'Lion' too slow, too short, too bad

Ali wins: Ho hum

SAN JUAN (AP) — Heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali tore down Jean-Pierre Coopman with his punches, then tried to build him up with words.

"He's a gentleman . . . he smiled at me every day," said Ali, after knocking out the Belgian challenger with a flurry of punches in the fifth round of their scheduled 15-round heavyweight championship bout Friday night.

Through an interpreter, Coopman said: "It felt like 500 pounds were falling on me, and I fell down."

"I'm glad he's not hurt," Ali said of Coopman, who was outclassed from the opening bell.

"It may not look like it, but it was a tough fight," Ali insisted.

It certainly didn't look that way to those at ringside.

man. As the round drew to a close, Ali unleashed a rapid-fire series of bombs to Coopman's head and the challenger crumpled in his corner, to be counted out at 2:46 of the round by referee Ismael Quinones Falu.

"He's hard to hit. He's a scientific defensive fighter," Ali said of Coopman. But to ringiders, it was hard to recall any of Ali's punches that missed.

Coopman had no offense. He couldn't have landed more than two or three punches to Ali's head and was ineffectual to the champion's body as well. In fact, the flashiest part of the Belgian were his bright red boxing trunks, plastered with advertisements.

Coopman, who says his idol is Joe Frazier, tried to pursue Ali in a style similar to Frazier—but he was a weak imitation of Smokin' Joe.

It was obvious that Ali could name the round, and it was the fifth when he fed the Lion of Flanders a lightning diet of head punches—and the Lion had his fill.

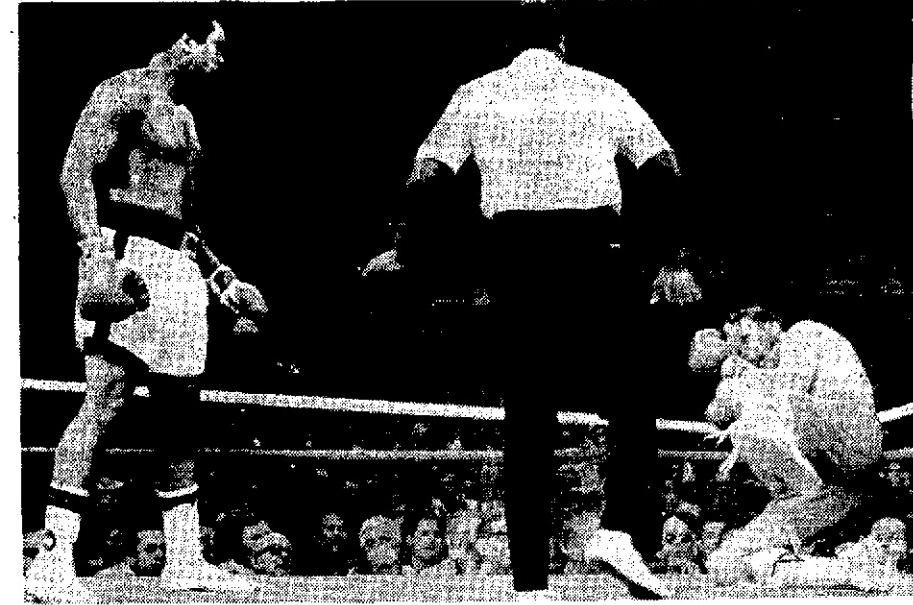

At 34, 6-foot-3 and 226 pounds, Ali was too experienced, too heavy and too fast for the 29-year-old sculptor. The 6-foot Coopman came in at 206.

Ali got $1.1 million, and while it was far from being his biggest payday, it might have been his easiest.

Coopman earned about $100,000 for his shellacking. It was more money than the Belgian had earned in all 27 of his previous fights, 24 of which he had won.

Coopman came in to the fight with a winning streak of 11. But these victories were over men with such names as Rosati, Faustino, Silvère and Anobebéle.

The opponent this time was the world champion, who proved to be far beyond Coopman's class.

Watson learns fast, leads L.A. Open

Sam fades, nearly disqualified

By DOUG IVES
Staff Writer

A bright, young psychology major from Stanford University, Tom Watson, is not afraid to solicit advice from the experts, even in the game of golf he played so brilliantly in 1975.

Not satisfied with his start this season, the 26-year-old Watson asked for and received a putting lesson from old pro Jerry Barber last week, a tip which could pay big dividends in the $185,000 Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open.

Watson shattered the Riviera Country Club course record on the front nine Friday, carding a 6-under 29, and went on to register a 66 which boosted him into a two-stroke lead at the midway point of this 50-year-old tournament.

Watson's 9-under 133, the equal are two-time tour winners Johnny Miller (74) at 146 and Ben Crenshaw (75) at 145. It took a 4-over 146 to survive the cut, so Miller and Crenshaw barely survived. Arnold Palmer had a 69 for 141.

Watson is 18th on the money list this year with $18,317 in earnings. But for one who pocketed $153,795 in 1975, winning the British Open, the World Series of Golf and finishing in the top 10 in all four major tournaments, this isn't any great achievement.

So Watson went to Barber, acknowledged as one of the truly fine putters, and asked what was wrong. Barber told him he was hitting too much off the right side and that his left shoulder was too high.

"I have to credit Barber for my success here," said the freckle-faced Watson. "I shifted my weight like he told me and now I'm accelerating through the ball. I've made a lot of good putts this week."

One he didn't make was on the 18th hole. He three-putted, missing a 3 1/2-footer. But Watson insisted that the few which didn't fall, including that one, was because he misread the green.

Watson, from Steamboat Springs, Colo., by way of Kansas City, birdied six of the nine holes on the front, dropping putts of 10, 4, 12, 12, 3 and 10 feet. He missed a 12-footer on the second, an 18-footer on the fourth and had to save a 4-foot par on the ninth.

The back side played tougher. Watson parred the first eight before the 3-putt ninth. He had birdie chances on the 15th, 16th and 17th but misread all the putts, the last one of four feet.

Tom Watson watches his ball closely as it rolls past cup on 18th hole. He took a bogey, but fired a 66 for the day to take two-stroke lead at halfway point of Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open at Riviera Country Club.

Believe it or not by Ripley and Stones!

NEW YORK (AP) — Pole vaulter Dan Ripley of the Pacific Coast Club of Long Beach and high jumper Dwight Stones of Long Beach State established all-time highs at the U.S. Olympic Invitational track meet Friday night at Madison Square Garden.

Ripley vaulted 18-3 1/4 to terminate the indoor record of 18-3 1/2 set last Friday night at Toronto by Wladyslaw Kozakiewicz of Poland.

Ripley, who held the mark of 18-1 at the beginning of the season, boosted it to 18-1 1/4 at College Park, Md., and raised it to 18-2 1/4 at Los Angeles. Another Pole, Tadeusz Slusarski, cleared 18-3 before his countryman broke it again last week.

Ripley cleared the record height on his third and final attempt. The bar fluttered several times but remained on the stanchions. He jogged a lap around the track to the cheers of 11,541 fans.

Stones' leap surpassed his own previous pinnacle of 7-5 1/4, established a year ago. The record came on his sixth jump—all successful—of the competition. It was the second highest jump ever recorded, trailing only Stones' outdoor standard of 7-6 1/4 that he established in 1973.

WINNERS (all distances in meters): 50-m. Cliff Outlin (Decatur AC) 5.6; 55 hurdles—Tom Hill (Army) 7.1; 100-m. Phil Kane (Villanova) 10.0; 200-m. Jim Berger (UCLA) 21.1; 300-m. Steve Vinton (Fla.) 30.1; 1-02.6; 3,000-m. Ron Martin (D.C. Striders) 7.99; 800-m. Orlando Greene (Stan Hall) 1:50.8; 400-m. Eric Jennings (Mississippi St.) 43.2; Women's 300-m. Celtics run circles around the Lakers

It was a familiar story.

The tireless Boston Celtics, as they have done so many times before, ran circles around the Lakers Friday night.

Maintaining a withering pace to the end, Boston spurted away in the final 10 minutes to post a 125-113 victory before 14,334 fans at the Forum.

The defeat, combined with a Seattle win, dropped the Lakers into third place in the Pacific Division for the first time since Jan. 11. The Lakers play in Seattle Sunday.

Center Dave Cowens was the ring-leader of the Boston victory, outscoring Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, 27-20, and outbounding his taller adversary by an incredible 24-7.

Nowhere in sight of the leaders

Guards Charley Scott and Jo Jo White also were outstanding. Scott survived two hard spills to score 28 points and White chipped in with 24.

Laker guards Gail Goodrich and Lucius Allen exceeded that output, Goodrich netting 33 and Allen 27. But Boston also had steady Paul Silas adding 19 points and 13 rebounds.

Scott was the difference down the stretch. An out-of-control player at Phoenix, he takes only high-percentage shots in Boston's well-rounded offense and he hit six in a row in the decisive fourth period.

The Lakers twice trailed by 14 points but rallied to catch the Celtics once and closed to within one point, 97-96. Then

Scott went on a spree and the Lakers never caught up.

Boston had lost four of five games on its current trip. But the Laker defense, so effective just a week ago, broke down badly against the Celtics' run-and-gun tactics.

Coach Bill Sharman of the Lakers acknowledged the winners for their spirited play but was upset that Abdul-Jabbar was taking a pounding from Cowens and Silas while the referees watched.

"There is a double standard in this league," he growled. "Abdul-Jabbar is do good that the refs don't protect him. The Celtics shoved him around all night."

Bumped or not, Abdul-Jabbar didn't have his usual shooting touch. He missed 16 of 24 shots. His rebound total of seven was his worst effort of the year, and bumping had nothing to do with this.

Sharman came to grips with the fact that his team can't run-out most NBA teams, so he has emphasized defense in recent weeks. But even using his best defenders did nothing to slow the Celtics.

"I don't know what's the matter," the coach moaned. "Until the Houston game Wednesday night and the game tonight we had been making good strides on defense. Now we give up easy baskets, just like we were doing in December and January."

St. Anthony wins, deadheats for title

Junior forward Jim Donnelly scored a season-high 28 points and grabbed 16 rebounds as St. Anthony High defeated host Bishop Amat 73-66 Friday night.

The win, combined with Mater Dei's 63-57 upset loss to Servite, enabled St. Anthony to finish the regular season in a tie for the Angelus League title with Mater Dei. The schools finished the regular season with 8-2 records.

The Jack Errion-coached Saints won the title outright last season.

St. Anthony never trailed, holding its biggest lead of the evening (12 points) after three periods.

Bishop Amat rallied in the final quarter, closing to within five points with five minutes remaining, but Donnelly's inside scoring kept St. Anthony safely ahead the rest of the way.

Donnelly collected 20 points and 21 rebounds in St. Anthony's first meeting with Bishop Amat.

Senior guard Dave Ramsey added 17

Karl Reul led the Lancers with 22 points.

Mater Dei led at halftime, 26-23, but was outscored by seven in the third period and couldn't catch the visiting Friars.

Monarch guard Jim Elenz was game's leading scorer with 18 points.

Neff escapes with OT win

Neff High almost played itself out of the CIF 2-A playoff picture Friday night, except for two major reprieves in the final 20 seconds of regulation play.

Escaping to overtime, the Trojans blitzed Mayfair 14-6 in the extra period to capture a 74-68 "must" win in the Suburban League finale.

The win enabled Neff to slither into a second-place tie with Artesia, which fell to Gahr, 51-40. The two bridesmaid teams finished with 7-3 records, three games off the unblemished 10-0 pace set by league champion Gahr.

Mayfair had plenty of opportunities to take the spoiler role against Neff. After the Trojans had established the tempo with their troublesome zone defense and first-half shooting led by John Spinoza (17 points after two periods), Mayfair came alive after intermission.

Forcing Neff to defend man-to-man, the Monsoons pulled into a 60-60 tie with four minutes remaining. The Trojans missed a shot at the 2:30 mark, and Mayfair controlled the ball until the final 20 seconds.

Then Ron Grindstaff missed his first shot in eight attempts, a three-footer, and Neff controlled the rebound.

Mayfair wasn't through. Curt Skinner stole the ball for the Monsoons, and Rich Diffine got a 20-footer off before the buzzer, but the ball glanced off the rim.

It was all Neff in overtime, beginning with the tipoff. Spinoza, who finished with 21 points, banked in a rebound basket to open the period. Steve McCarthy hit two 15-foot jumpers to put the Trojans up by six, and the Monsoons did not threaten again.

Gahr jumped to a quick 10-0 lead, faltered in the second quarter to lead 24-23 at halftime, then outscored Artesia 27-17 after intermission to conclude circuit play undefeated.

Harold Homsher hit 7-of-9 from the field (17 points) to pace the Gladiators, now 21-6 overall and rated No. 5 in CIF, while Rodney Brandon chipped in 13 points and grabbed 18 rebounds.

Excelsior concluded its Suburban season with a 79-57 victory over Glenn.

Patty sobs fears, reveals bombing to jury

By LINDA DEUTSCH

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Speaking over the objections of her prosecutor, Patricia Hearst told her jury Friday of last week's million-dollar bombing at the Hearst castle — a sign, she said, that her life was still in danger.

Testifying on her 22nd birthday, the heiress blurted out her announcement just before U.S. Atty.

James L. Browning finished three days of cross-examination that sought to counter her self-portrait as a fear-stricken victim, even now, of the Symbionese Liberation Army.

"If they wanted me killed, all they had to do was say it," a sobbing Miss Hearst said of her former captors.

"It's happening right now," she added, telling the panel of the explosion at fabled San Simeon and the threats against her family that followed. The sequestered jury had not previously heard the story.

It was a birthday nearly as bizarre as the past two, spent in the company of terrorists. Clad in blue blazer and slacks, Miss Hearst smiled when she opened a birthday card. Later, she was shown a picture of a cake held by one of the 15 would-be spectators outside the courthouse. Browning may cross-examine her again if the trial judge approves admission of evidence the defense is seeking to keep from the jury in her bank robbery trial. The evidence is a recorded jailhouse conversation and documents concerning Miss Hearst's movements before her arrest.

The star witness took the stand Feb. 13 to tell the jury, often tearfully, about her abduction and subsequent captivity by the SLA. Browning began questioning her Wednesday afternoon.

The prosecutor repeatedly sought to establish that Miss Hearst was a willing participant in the bank robbery and had undergone a genuine conversion to the terrorist ranks. Repeatedly, he implied, she passed up opportunities to leave the terrorist ranks.

Asked later if he planned to question his client again after a judge's ruling on disputed evidence, F. Lee Bailey said he had not yet decided but noted, "Redirect is to repair damage which has been done, and so far I can't see that any has been done."

The final witness of the day was Ulysses Hall, who testified about talks he had with Donald DeFreeze, the SLA's "Field Marshal Cinque." Hall, brought here from jail in San Joaquin County, said that DeFreeze had told him of threatening Miss Hearst with a gun just before the April 15, 1974, robbery of the Hibernia Bank.

Miss Hearst, crying for the second time in the day, said under Brown-ing's persistent questioning that she feared SLA

PORTRUSH, N.H. — Richard Nixon's departure Friday on a visit to China has forced to the surface an awkward issue that President Ford had been hoping to avoid in his close and possibly crucial contest with Ronald Reagan in the New Hampshire Republican primary.

Ford boarded his Air Force jet Friday afternoon to return to Washington after his final campaign trip to New Hampshire, and three hours later, Nixon boarded a Chinese plane in Los Angeles on a visit that as White House and Ford campaign aides had feared, revived lingering questions and resentments about Ford's pardon of his predecessor 18 months ago.

Vice President Rockefeller says Nixon's trip may have been timed to help John Connally's bid for GOP presidential nomination. Story on Page A-4.

"Maybe," said one Ford associate wistfully, "New Hampshire Republicans will sympathize with the President because Nixon jobbed him."

But the more likely expectation, widely shared and generally resented among Ford's campaign workers, was that Nixon's revisit to Peking would do more harm than good to

Reagan tells of Ford Cabinet-post offers

By JON NORDHEIMER
New York Times Service

MANCHESTER, N.H. — Ronald Reagan, seeking to defuse President Ford's contention that he is "too far to the right," said Friday that he twice had been offered Cabinet posts in the Ford administration.

The former governor of California, who is challenging Ford for the Republican nomination in Tuesday's New Hampshire primary, made the disclosure in response to campaign statements by the President.

"I am a little surprised about his statement about my so-called extremism," Reagan said in response to questions in a news conference concerning the President's remarks. "It does come rather strange because he tried on two different occasions to persuade me to accept any of several Cabinet positions in his administration," he said.

The first proposal, Reagan explained, was made directly by the President in late 1974 when he held out the possibility of several Cabinet positions.

The second offer was made last spring by Donald Rumsfeld, the President's chief of staff, and the job of secretary of Commerce was specifically discussed, Reagan continued.

The candidate also suggested that the President had been "given some bad briefings by his own

SLA mistrial declared

Associated Press

The judge in the trial of Symbionese Liberation Army members Russell Little and Joseph Remiro declared a mistrial Friday in Remiro's portion of the case after jurors reported they were hopelessly deadlocked.

Superior Court Judge M. Ross Bigelow scheduled March 25 for a hearing to set a date for retrial on Remiro.

The seven-woman, five-man jury found Little not guilty Thursday of assault and attempted murder charges stemming from a shootout with a Concord police sergeant in January 1974.

Both Little, 26, and Remiro, 29, are serving life sentences for the murder of Oakland Schools Supt. Marcus Foster.

Worst-air-polluter charges unfounded, says oil company

By KRIS SHERMAN
Staff Writer

A spokesman for the Standard Oil Co. refinery in El Segundo Friday afternoon called "erroneous and unfounded" charges made earlier in the day that the plant "is the worst air pollution violator ever detected."

Jim Daly, a spokesman for the oil company, added that his firm would produce statements at a public hearing in Los Angeles today refuting the charges made Friday by State Air Resources Board Chairman Tom Quinn.

Quinn, in a statement and report issued in Sacramento, said the company's El Segundo refinery was emitting an estimated 3,000 tons of hydrocarbons per year.

Those hydrocarbons, Quinn said, "cause as much smog as 378,000 cars meeting California's 1977 emission standards."

Quinn scheduled an emergency board meeting for 10 this morning in Room 350 of the Los Angeles City Hall.

In his statements to the press, Quinn also charged that the Los Angeles County Air Pollution Control District "ignored the problem for many years and consistently refused to properly inspect Standard's refinery."

He said a special Air Resources Board investigation of the plant, which contains about 800 storage tanks, was conducted from Jan. 26 to Feb. 11.

He added that investigators believe "extremely poor" maintenance at the facility has resulted in the escape of the hydrocarbons and resulting "massive and continuing pollution for many, many years."

"Our staff discovered that almost all of Standard's gasoline and petroleum storage tanks have significant leaks which allow the product to evaporate into the air," Quinn said.

"Because of this vapor loss, the equivalent of more than 3,200 gallons of gasoline is being lost into the air each day."

Daly, however, said Quinn's charges were "erroneous and unfounded," adding that Standard Oil officials plan to present evidence to the contrary during this morning's public hearing.

"Any storage tank has some emissions," Daly said, "but there are normal and abnormal emissions. We feel that our storage tanks fall within normal ranges."

Daly also said hydrocarbon emissions from storage tanks "are extremely hard to measure" and questioned the credibility of the board's figures.

He said a Standard Oil Company executive flew to Sacramento Friday to get a hand-delivered copy of Quinn's report but found the document was missing the emission tables on which Quinn's

Church blasts Ford spy plan

By CLARK HOYT
Knight News Service

WASHINGTON — Senate Intelligence Committee Chairman Frank Church charged Friday that President Ford's intelligence reorganization is an effort

"to give the CIA a bigger shield and a longer sword both to stab within and without the country."

Ford's 36-page executive order recasting the American intelligence structure contains little reform, is in part "contrary to present law" and in part exceeds the President's authority, Church declared.

Church's strong criticism, delivered in soft tones over a coffee and pastry breakfast with reporters, was especially significant because his panel is expected to produce recommendations of its own soon for reforming the government's intelligence community and practices.

Ford's reorganization, including the executive order and proposed legislation, was announced earlier this week. It restricts the power of intelligence agencies to spy on American citizens, but also spells out for the first time in detail circumstances under which certain domestic operations can be undertaken.

The Ford plan also attempts to tighten government secrecy by providing penalties for officials who divulge classified information.

Church said it is against present law for the CIA to carry out operations in this country aimed at U.S. citizens.

"It would be a grave mistake to permit the CIA, after all we've learned about it, to start operations in the United States," Church said.

He charged that the President's effort to clamp down on the flow of information that happens to be classified is "a long step toward government by secrecy. We are seriously impairing the right of government employees to expose wrongful or unlawful

'Miracle healer' dies

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Kathryn Kuhlman, internationally known as a "faith healer," died Friday night at a Tulsa hospital of pulmonary hypertension, hospital officials said.

Miss Kuhlman, whose age was not disclosed, had been hospitalized since Dec. 28, when she underwent open-heart surgery for replacement of a mitral valve.

Funeral services will be private, but memorial services are expected to be held Monday or Tuesday in Pittsburgh, Pa., and Youngstown, Ohio, where she held services two sisters live. The sisters, Myrtle Parritt and Geneva Dixson, are her only surviving relatives.

Wilkinson said Miss Kuhlman failed to regain her strength, although she recovered successfully from the surgery and had been moved from the hospital's intensive-care unit.

Funeral services will be private, but memorial services are expected to be held Monday or Tuesday in Pittsburgh, Pa., and Youngstown, Ohio, where she held services

Mo., Miss Kuhlman was the daughter of the town's mayor, Joe Kuhlman. She was converted in her mother's church (Methodist) and baptized in her father's church (Baptist) two years before she was called to preach. Ordained a Baptist minister, she never affiliated with a church and did not consider herself a pastor or an evangelist.

"I try to keep my place as a woman," she said. "That's the reason I have no church as such. I leave that to the men."

She took a salary of $25,000 a year, although her ministry also reportedly brought an annual $2 million to the Kathryn Kuhlman Foundation in Pittsburgh. Through that organization she carried on a program of foreign missions, drug rehabilitation and education of the handicapped.

Muskie lashes car makers for smog-control 'failure'

By ROBERT OSTMANN
Knight News Service

DETROIT, Mich. — Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, lashed out at the automobile industry Friday for "its utter failure to adopt a sense of urgency in dealing with pollution problems."

He told the Economic Club:

"In the 1960s, we tried to leave it to the industry to voluntarily remedy the problem. Then the Clean Air Act was passed in 1970, and the industry has been given extensions until 1980 to meet air-quality standards. Still the industry regards auto-emission controls as dispensable, while air-pollution problems are clearly worse than we thought they would be now."

"HOW LONG must the people wait for air that is fit to breathe?" he asked.

Muskie, a proponent of environmental legislation for many years in Congress, said he found the claims of industry and union officials that auto-emission controls would cost too much and eliminate too many jobs "tragically ironic."

"While the industry says we can do without devices that clean the air because they are too costly, it insists on putting air conditioners and power steering in cars, both of which are expensive and use energy," Muskie said.

Muskie, a presidential candidate in 1972 and Hubert Humphrey's running mate in 1968, also attacked President Ford's recent veto of a bill that would have created public jobs for the unemployed.

He SAID the bill, which Ford described as "election-year pork barrel," would have meant $48 million for jobs in Detroit in the repair and construction of parks, schools, and other public facilities. "When there are no jobs in the private sector, that is the time to construct needed public facilities," Muskie said. "That is the government's responsibility. I don't call that pork barrel."

"I find it appalling that a President is taking comfort in an unemployment rate of 7.8 per cent," said Muskie, who is chairman of the Senate Budget Committee.

The Senate failed Thursday by three votes to override the President's veto after the House had overwhelmingly voted to do so.

Muskie's news conference before the speech was disrupted by two men who identified themselves as representatives of the U.S. Labor Party. They began shouting at Muskie about his stand on First Amendment abuses by government before being forcibly ejected from the news conference by two reporters.

Ford orders aid reform

Combined News Services

WASHINGTON — President Ford has ordered the Agriculture Department to bypass Congress and swiftly "issue regulations which will set in motion the reforms needed" in the controversial food stamp program, it was disclosed Friday. Ford's decision came in letters sent to Rep. Thomas Foley, D-Wash., and Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., chairmen of their respective chamber's agriculture committees. The letters were dated Thursday — the same day a White House spokesman denied to the Senate Agriculture Committee that Ford had decided to take regulatory changes rather than await congressional action.

Boeing evidence

WASHINGTON — A federal judge ordered the Boeing Co. on Friday to provide the Securities and Exchange Commission with any evidence that the aircraft manufacturer made foreign payoffs to enhance its sales overseas. U.S. District Judge Thomas Flannery agreed, however, to set limits on making public the results on making public the results of an SEC investigation. Boeing has denied making any improper or illegal payments similar to those acknowledged by the Lockheed Aircraft Corp. and other large U.S. firms. The SEC had said it is seeking any records showing "disbursements of substantial sums" to foreign officials.

Sadat seeks aid for Egypt

Last of SEATO

CAIRO — President Anwar Sadat leaves today for Saudi Arabia and the Persian Gulf seeking new infusions of money to keep Egypt afloat and to demonstrate he remains the pre-eminent leader of the Arab world. Cash prospects look good, but political ones less certain. Sadat will spend five days in Saudi Arabia, then fly to Abu Dhabi, Bahrain, Qatar and Kuwait. Sadat needs Arab oil dollars to continue massive government imports to import essential commodities for Egypt's 30 million people, almost all of them poor. He also needs the cash to rebuild the country, run down after four wars since 1948 with Israel. The Egyptian view is that wealthy Arab regimes are morally obligated to help because Egypt bore the major burdens in these conflicts.

Early elections

BUENOS AIRES — President Isabel Peron's government scheduled elections for Dec. 12, but splits among Peronist party leaders raised new doubts Friday whether she would remain in office that long.

Elections normally would be held in March 1977, but Mrs. Peron said Wednesday night they would take place this year. She also said she would not run, but would serve until expiration of her current term May 25, 1977. Her announcement was seen as a compromise with critics who have urged her to step aside, making way for a leader more able to cope with Argentina's economic ills and guerrilla violence. Some of the critics predict a military coup if she stays. Informed sources also said six members of the 16-member Peronist Ruling Council resigned after a stormy session Friday, and that those who stayed demanded changes in Mrs. Peron's government.

Kesey

Schorr will cover or who will cover intelligence developments.

The Justice Department's criminal division and the FBI are conducting a preliminary review of the various leaks of portions of the intelligence committee's report to determine whether there is evidence that any laws have been broken and whether a formal investigation should be started.

"It's not a disciplinary action," said William Headline, assistant CBS news editor in Washington. "It's just that we found this is the only feasible way to do it."

Schorr was reassigned from covering the controversy over the Select House Intelligence Committee's report last week after he confirmed he was responsible for publication of part of the report in The Village Voice, a New York weekly newspaper.

Schorr was to have continued covering other intelligence developments in Washington, but Headline said the bureau found the House story could not easily be separated from other developments.

For example, he said, Schorr might be sent to cover Central Intelligence Director George Bush and find the story involved Bush's comments on the House report.

Headline said CBS' decision was not related in any way to the House's order to the Ethics Committee Thursday to investigate the newspaper publication of the report and Schorr's role in it.

Schorr has been put on general assignment, Headline said. He said no decisions have been made on what specific stories

Rene Cassin, winner of the Nobel Peace Prize in 1968 and one of the first Frenchmen to rally to Gen. Charles de Gaulle and the Free French in World War II, died Friday in a Paris hospital. He was 88.

A jurist by profession, Cassin passed most of his career in French government service. As vice chairman of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights, he worked closely with Eleanor Roosevelt in framing the Declaration on Human Rights. Later he was president of the European Court of Human Rights. His efforts in this field led to his Nobel prize.

Entertainers

Loretta Lynn has been named entertainer of the year by the Academy of Country Music at its 11th annual awards dinner at the Hollywood Palladium.

Miss Lynn was also named female vocalist of the year and Conway Twitty was named male vocalist of the year at the award ceremony on Thursday. They were cited as the top vocal group and their recording of "Feelings" was named album of the year.

Glenn Campbell's "Rhinestone Cowboy" was named single record of the year and song of the year.

Crystal Gayle was selected as most promising female vocalist and Freddie Fender as most promising male vocalist.

The Palomino Riders with Jerry Inman was named the touring band of the year. The Strangers with Merle Haggard was selected as touring band of the year.

Billy Parker of radio station KVOO in Tulsa, Okla., was named disc jockey of the year.

American poet and short story writer Elizabeth Bishop, who won a Pulitzer Prize for her volume of verse "A Cold Spring," was named winner Friday of the biennial Books Abroad-Neustadt International Prize for Literature in Norman, Okla.

She is the first American ever to win the award, given by the University of Oklahoma and "Books Abroad," the oldest international English language literary quarterly. She was selected over nine other nominees from throughout the world by a panel of judges representing 11 countries.

Former middleweight boxer Sugar Ray Robinson asked $500,000 damages Friday in federal court in New York from three film distributors, charging they sold copies of films of his bouts without his consent.

Robinson, of Los Angeles, asked the court to enjoin sale of films by Turn of the Century Fights Inc., The Big Fights Inc., and Home Box Office, all of Manhattan. Robinson's lawyers claimed invasion of privacy and unlawful appropriation of his rights.

Eddie Fisher strikes out at love again

Singer Eddie Fisher says he has struck out at love for the fourth time. Fisher was quoted Friday by the London Daily Mirror as saying his fourth wife, 21-year-old college beauty queen Terry Richard, has left him after less than four months of marriage.

"My wife is living with friends and there is no chance of us getting back together," Fisher was quoted as saying.

Super Bowl '77

A friend told me he heard on a sportscast there will no 1977 Super Bowl tickets available for the general public. The game is going to be played in the Rose Bowl. Is his report correct? R.E., Garden Grove.

Unless you are a season ticket holder for one of the two teams which play in the Super Bowl, you apparently haven't much chance of getting a ticket for the game. The bulk of the tickets for the Super Bowl are distributed by the clubs which play in the world series of professional football and clubs generally give their season ticket holders first crack at them. Each of the teams in the National Football League are allocated some Super Bowl tickets but, according to a spokesman for the Los Angeles Rams, "we got a couple of hundred (this year) and that wasn't enough even for our own team's needs." The team in the area where the game is played gets extra tickets — that would be the Rams in 1977 — but they are expected to be snapped up by the team's season ticket holders who, as with the competing clubs, will get top priority. Season tickets for the Rams go on sale in March and cost $80, $80 and $100. You may write the NFL at 410 Park Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022, for further information on the Super Bowl.

Can Action Line find out the name of the Polish song that Bobby Vinton sings at the beginning and end of his television show? My husband and I love to hear this song and would like to buy a recording of it so that we can play it all the way through. E.C., Long Beach.

The song is entitled "My Melody of Love," which Vinton recorded last year as a single. It sold 2 million copies. You should be able to buy or order it at most record shops. In the early 1960s, Vinton, now 41, was a favorite with the teeny bopper set, but then faded from the spotlight along with most of the other rock-n-roll stars of that era. In 1975, Vinton, who is of Polish descent, cashed in on the ethnic-awareness trend and recorded "My Melody of Love," an old European tune to which he added Polish lyrics. Because of that recording, which was played regularly on the radio for months, Vinton attracted a sizeable following among older American Poles, was honored at the Polish consulate in Washington, D.C. and was signed to do a syndicated television variety show, which scores very high in the ratings in cities with large Polish communities.

Cleaning dispute

Bailey Rug and Upholstery Cleaners, 17918 S. Bellflower Blvd., in Bellflower, cleaned my wall-to-wall carpet Aug. 21 and the next week we noticed the carpet still had a dirty odor. Steve Cook, owner of the cleaning firm, came back to my home and sprayed a deodorant directly onto the carpet. This treatment caused spots and he came back twice more and shampooed the carpet in an attempt to remove them. All the spots didn't come out and the additional shampooing caused the carpet to become musty smelling. It also lost its body and became fuzzy. Cook said this was all his fault and agreed to pay $100 of the $773.31 that it would cost to replace the carpet. He didn't pay the money and he says now that he will not pay anything. Can you solve this problem for us? M.R.W., Lakewood.

No. Cook told us he feels the problems with the carpet are not his fault and that if you had let him come back after allowing time for the carpet to dry to continue working on the few remaining spots — which he described as a brown film — he could have removed them. He said the film was caused by a chemical reaction between the deodorant and your type of carpet and that he had sprayed deodorant on carpets many times without any problems. He said he hadn't "noticed the dog odor" when he first came out and that if you had told him "the carpet stunk, I'd have put the deodorant in the shampoo and there would have been no problem at all." Cook said he originally planned to pay part of the cost of a new carpet in order to keep your goodwill but said he didn't "recall saying $100." He said he decided not to pay when he "realized that no matter what I did, I'd lose her as a customer and she wouldn't recommend me" to others."

Merchant accused of peddling hot platters

Associated Press

James Greenwood, owner of the Licorice Pizza Co. record stores, has been named in a 33-count complaint filed Friday in Glendale Municipal Court.

Deputy Dist. Atty. Robert Cohen said Greenwood is accused of purchasing records, "with the knowledge that the records were stolen."

from the Wherhouse, K-Mart, White Front and Record Bar.

Sheriff's Deputy Thomas Budds said Greenwood allegedly bought the records from shoplifters at reduced prices for resale in his own stores.

Budds said Greenwood, owner of the Superior Music Co., the holding company for Licorice Pizza, will be asked to surrender for a preliminary hearing to be set in Glendale Municipal Court.

Lost hikers located

IDYLLWILD (AP) — Eleven persons on a nature hike were stranded Friday in the Dark Canyon area of San Bernardino National Forest, authorities said.

The search began when the group failed to turn up at a campground Friday afternoon.

They were found at the 4,000-foot level in the rugged canyon area.

Gales that shut highways bring clear weekend sky

Winds that swept the Southland and toppled camper trucks in the deserts brought clear skies and "spectacular" weather for the weekend, a National Weather Service spokesman said.

Forecaster Bill Sullivan said the northwest winds of Thursday night and Friday morning were "shifted around" to a mild Santa Ana condition Friday.

The result for the weekend is "very clear" air, with mild and warmer weather, he said.

Gale-force winds in the deserts earlier forced closure of Interstate 15 between Baker and Barstow and Interstate 40 between Ludlow and Newberry Springs for brief periods.

Wind and blowing sand also forced temporary closure of California 111 in Palm Springs, a police spokesman said.

THE HIGHWAY Patrol said at least 50 vehicles had to be towed away during a two-hour period in the Palm Springs area, and one officer said a wind gust blew out the rear window of his patrol car.

Sullivan said the winds, which also buffeted Long Beach with gusts up to 26 miles per hour, were caused by a low-pressure trough over Arizona and Utah.

Plane crash probe set

Associated Press

The Los Angeles City Fire Department will conduct a full investigation into a plane crash explosion that resulted in injuries to 10 firemen Feb. 8, Fire Chief Kenneth Long said.

Long told the Fire Commission Thursday that the investigation would center on steps to prevent a recurrence of explosive-type fires like the one that occurred when a DC6 charter plane crashed on a San Fernando Valley golf course.

The fire chief said the fire resulted when sparks from a power saw ignited fuel that had spilled over the ground where firemen were standing.

"We may have to use more foam on the ground or spray foam in the future," Long said.

Other department spokesmen said the investigation also would focus on the clothing firemen were wearing and the types of burns they received.

"They have already come up with the recommendation that all field members will be wearing boots at least six inches high," said one spokesman. He said they also were urging firemen wear "turn-out pants" that are made of canvas and "have a higher tolerance" to heat and flame.

Rocky links Nixon trip, Connally bid

By REMER TYSON
Knight News Service

LANSING, Mich.—Vice President Nelson Rockefeller said Friday that former President Nixon may have timed his trip to China in hopes of opening the Republican presidential race to John Connally.

Rockefeller, here for a Michigan GOP fund-raiser, told a press conference that he thought the timing of the Nixon visit during the week of the New Hampshire primary was "unusual."

He said he didn't think Nixon's visit would affect the voting between President Ford and challenger Ronald Reagan in New Hampshire next Tuesday, "but whether that was the intent or not, that is another question."

When newsmen pressed Rockefeller to clarify whether he was saying Nixon was trying to help Reagan, he responded:

"You could make a whole series of scenarios."

And there is even another one you haven't mentioned... which is a little more complicated."

Pressed to explain that, Rockefeller said, "It related to a question about another possibility of who would be available — Mr. Connally."

Connally, a former Democratic governor of Texas, served as Nixon's secretary of the Treasury and in 1972 switched to the Republican Party.

Asked whether he was saying that Nixon was trying to help Connally, Rockefeller said "that's one of the scenarios. If one were speculating, that would certainly be one you would speculate about."

Rockefeller did not detail how Nixon's China visit would help Connally.

Presumably, under such a scenario, Nixon's visit would hurt Ford in New Hampshire but wouldn't help Reagan enough to make him a favorite for the Republican nomination.

Again, presumably, this would open the way in the later nominating process for Connally to slip onto the party's ticket.

Connally is being promoted as a write-in candidate in the Democratic primary in New Hampshire by an official fundraiser for Alabama Gov. George Wallace. Wallace is not running in the New Hampshire primary.

Rockefeller predicted that Ford would win in primaries in New Hampshire, Florida and Illinois "and go on to win the nomination."

"Gov. Reagan's campaign peaked too early," Rockefeller said.

The vice-president said that he could not "visualize any way" that he would run for president this year.

Rockefeller had withdrawn himself as a prospective vice presidential candidate under Ford. This has led to speculation that if Ford should make a poor showing in the early primaries, Rockefeller might step into the presidential campaign.

In other matters, Rockefeller said he supported a $750-million community-development program bill sponsored by Rep. Gary Brown, R-Mich., in the wake of Ford's veto of the Democratic-sponsored $6.2 billion jobs bill.

Rockefeller spoke at a Republican Bicentennial tribute dinner Friday night.

Ford urges Congress to revive election unit fast

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford urged Congress on Friday to take all the simple and necessary steps of reconstituting the Federal Election Commission in a constitutional manner and not to introduce any other changes now.

Noting that there were only nine days left for Congress to comply with the Supreme Court's March 1 deadline to correct constitutional errors in the commission, Ford said: "There is simply no time to consider with sufficient care amendments to the law which are not essential to compliance with the Supreme Court decision."

He said that with the primaries just beginning this was not the time to introduce "changes and new uncertainties into the law."

Ford wants simply to correct the appointment of members to the commission, which the court said was unconstitutional because Congress named some of them.

Ford's comments came after the chairman of the Senate elections subcommittee, Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., unveiled a bill coupling partial public financing of congressional campaigns with a restructuring of the commission.

But Ford's proposal was simply to make the commission members presidential appointees subject to confirmation by the Senate and to leave the commission intact otherwise through the 1976 elections.

Moynihan

Moynihan rejected party aid

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — A citizens' organization gave money to American U.N. ambassadors to subsidize U.S. mission parties for about a dozen years until Daniel Patrick Moynihan rejected the offer last year, informed officials said Friday.

Moynihan said his discontinuance of the arrangement did not necessarily mean he found anything wrong with it.

James Leonard, president of the U.N. Association of the U.S.A., estimated that the organization paid "probably over $100,000 and well under $200,000" to the U.S. mission during the 1961-65 period of the late Adlai E. Stevenson's ambassadorship.

"I PERSONALLY see nothing wrong with it," Leonard said, "and would not in any way censure my predecessors for having developed this arrangement."

He said Stevenson began giving money he received for speeches to a forerunner of Leonard's organization, the U.N. Association of the U.S., and remarked about the mission's skimpy entertainment.

"Representation" — allowance. Leonard said he did not know whether all ambassadors after Stevenson took the money. Others who served in that period were Arthur J. Goldberg, George Ball, J. Russell Wiggins, Charles W. Yost and George Bush.

rules under which citizens may be allowed to participate in the 1976 elections, and I urge that the Congress take only the simple and necessary steps of reconstituting the Federal Election Commission in an appropriate constitutional manner."

FORD ISSUED the statement after meeting with members of his staff at the White House Friday evening upon his return from a campaign trip in New Hampshire.

Pell presented his own measure at a subcommittee meeting called to consider various bills introduced in the wake of the Supreme Court's decision that the FEC may not perform executive functions under its present structure.

Pell's bill is similar in most respects to one proposed earlier this week by Rep. Wayne L. Hays, D-Ohio, except for its public-financing provisions.

Hays is chairman of the House Administration Committee, which is expected to take up the measure early next week.

THE THREE Senate subcommittee members agreed to refer Pell's bill, without recommendation, to the full Rules Committee, its parent body, for consideration.

Sens. Dick Clark, D-Iowa, and Robert P. Griffin, R-Mich., the other subcommittee members, said they each have substitute proposals. And Pell said he wasn't wedded to all the details of his bill.

Thus, differences will be threshed out when the Rules Committee meets at a date not yet set.

Under the Supreme Court's Jan. 30 decision, Congress is facing a March 1 deadline for passing legislation to restructure the commission or have it lose most of its powers.

The 1974 campaign-finance law that created the commission provided for appointment of four of its six members by Congress. The court ruled that an executive agency could not be so constituted under the separation-of-powers doctrine.

All the bills introduced since then provide for presidential appointment of the commission members, subject to Senate approval, but many of them also propose controversial changes in the 1974 law.

This has raised doubts that Congress can pass legislation before the end of the month to keep the commission functioning.

Maddox in N.H., denounces Carter as 'radical liberal'

Knight News Service

MANCHESTER, N.H.—Lester Maddox, who preceded Jimmy Carter as governor of Georgia, held a press conference here Friday to denounce Carter as "a radical liberal" and the most dishonest person I've ever known in my life."

Maddox said that his trip here was paid for by "six friends" whom he would not name. Although Maddox dubbed Carter "a radical liberal" most other observers view Carter as the most conservative of the five major Democrats entered in New Hampshire's presidential primary.

Maddox disclosed that on his arrival in New Hampshire Thursday night one local Democrat

whom he did not identify gave him a list of persons allegedly supporting Carter who also supported liberal George S. McGovern in 1972. Maddox said this proved that Carter, who once ran on the same ticket as Maddox, is no conservative but rather, "the Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde of 1976."

Carter's supporters jammed into Maddox's press conference and at one point Maddox told one of them to "shut up" when she tried to ask a question.

"Being called a liar by Lester Maddox is like being called ugly by a frog," Powell said.

Miss., Puerto Rico delegates

Associated Press

Mississippi and Puerto Rico will select presidential nominating delegates over the weekend, with George Wallace strategists expecting to pick up more than half of the 19 Mississippi delegates and Sen. Henry Jackson favored to be the top vote-getter in Puerto Rico.

The Mississippi conventions, to be held Saturday in each of the five congressional districts, will also elect the state party's executive committee and set the stage for the Feb. 29 state convention.

Mississippi will send 24 delegates to the national convention in New York, with the five remaining delegates chosen at the state convention.

Former Georgia Gov.

Jimmy Carter and former Peace Corps director and Kennedy in-law R. Sargent Shriver, two other candidates who waged active campaigns for Mississippi support, also hope to pick up delegates.

The caucuses in San Juan on Sunday could give a boost to one or more of the Democratic presidential hopefuls, especially since the voting results will appear in Monday's papers, the day before New Hampshire votes cast ballots in the nation's first primary.

Puerto Rico will send 17 delegates and 18 alternates to the Democratic convention. The caucuses are open and theoretically anybody could be nominated. But only four major contenders bothered to designate "moderators" to represent them: Carter, Jackson, Shriver and Sen. Birch Bayh of Indiana.

Five at-large delegates and four more alternates from Puerto Rico will be chosen March 7.

In Mississippi, two Democratic factions are cooperating in the delegate selection process for the first time since the civil rights-oriented Loyalists wrestled national party recognition from the state-dominant Regulars in 1968.

A large uncommitted bloc elected to the congressional district caucuses will be a major factor in deciding the final division of strength among the candidates or whether there will be unpledged delegates to the national convention. The uncommitted can switch to a candidate at the caucuses or remain unpledged.

Slightly more than half of the delegates elected by last week's county conventions to the caucuses are pledged to alliance and the uncommitted pool was 28 per cent. Carter has 11 per cent and Shriver 10 per cent.

"Of the 19 delegates to be selected Saturday, we expect Gov. Wallace to receive between 9 and 11," said state campaign spokesman Jack Shearer Jr. "The problem is that in a couple of districts you can't tell what the groups representing the other candidates will do if they fall below the required percentage. You can't anticipate new alignments."

Under party rules, a candidate gets no delegate votes unless his supporters constitute at least 15 per cent of those attending the caucuses. Supporters falling under that percentage are free to join another group or to withdraw from the selection process.

A state party spokesman said the nominating delegates must support their candidate for the first round of presidential balloting at the national convention, "but they can switch after that."

AFL-CIO opens campaign for nursing-home reforms

AP Labor Writer

MIAMI BEACH — The AFL-CIO Friday announced a nationwide campaign to "clean up this nation's nursing homes," calling them a scandal and a national disgrace.

AFL-CIO leaders said community service committees in each of the labor federation's state and local central bodies would be asked to investigate nursing homes and make results public in hope of spurring official investigations.

"We seek no spit and polish tour," the labor federation said in a statement adopted by its

The council charged that the federal government has "shamefully ignored" investigating the nursing home industry despite extensive testimony and documentation exposing "frauds and ripoffs."

"The AFL-CIO demands action," the council said.

"The patients in nursing homes are our members, our parents, our friends and our relatives."

In its statement, the council said that some

nursing home operators — particularly of profit-making homes — medical laboratories, clinics, doctors and insurance company officials "are skimming their share off the top of the Medicare and Medicaid programs, reducing care for the elderly and subverting public support for these important programs."

Nelson Crulkishank, president of the National Council of Senior Citizens which represents three million elderly persons, said the Department of Health, Education and Welfare has not carried out its responsibility for investigating the nursing home industry.

New beef grades: few shoppers will spot difference

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press

New government standards for grading beef take effect Monday after almost a year of controversy and court battles, but shoppers will find it hard to spot the difference at the supermarket.

Consumer groups — still trying to get the Supreme Court to hear their case — argue that the new standards mean people will be paying "choice" prices for beef that used to be graded only "good."

The U.S. Department of Agriculture says shoppers won't be able to tell the difference in appearance or taste. They also say the changes will cut costs for cattlemen by enabling them to feed their animals less grain and therefore help keep retail prices down.

THE USDA ORIGINALLY planned to put the new standards into effect last April. Court suits and arguments held up implementation.

Meanwhile in Dallas, U.S. District Court Judge Patrick E. Higginbotham said Friday that he would decide today or Sunday whether to grant a temporary injunction sought by the Texas baby-beef industry against the Department of Agriculture's implementation of the rules.

Industry spokesmen have testified that the new grading would mean higher prices for consumers because stores would refuse to buy the new downgraded "standard" light beef.

Even if the injunction is granted, the USDA could appeal to the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

"But it would be pretty hard to get a stay before Monday morning," said Stephen Holley, an attorney for the industry.

Regardless of the judge's decision, a more detailed hearing will be held later to decide if the industry should be granted a permanent injunction.

FOR MILLIONS OF PEOPLE, the change in standards won't mean anything at all. That's because several major chains do not sell graded beef.

Grading should not be confused with inspection. All meat sold for human consumption is inspected for wholesomeness. Grading, which is voluntary, applies only to tenderness, flavor and juiciness.

The USDA reports that in the first nine months of 1975 only 45 per cent of all federally inspected beef was graded. Of this, 5 per cent was graded "prime," 78 per cent was graded "choice" and 13 per cent was graded "good." The rest was graded "standard" and "utility" and went into things like processed meats.

Much of the ungraded beef also went into processed meats, but a USDA spokesman said there were "considerable quantities of ungraded beef at the retail level."

The amount of ungraded beef available at retail stores has grown steadily in recent years. The increase reflects changes in the way cattle are raised and shifts in American tastes.

ON THE ONE HAND, ranchers faced with rising corn prices cut back the amount of grain they fed their animals. This meant leaner cattle that did not meet the marbling standards for choice-grade beef and therefore were marketed as ungraded.

At the same time, consumers were looking for less expensive meat. They were concerned about fat in their diets and wanted leaner cuts, so they were more willing to buy beef without the government grade stamp.

A&P, the nation's second largest chain, has its own rating system and sells government-graded beef only where it is required by local law. Why doesn't the chain offer the graded varieties? "You try to sell your own identity," said an A&P spokesman. "We never have (sold government-graded beef), and we think the customer has been well satisfied."

Even if your store does sell graded beef, you may find it difficult to spot any changes unless you are expert enough to recognize the differences in the marbling. In addition, the changes will affect only a small portion of the meat sold. Most of the beef you find graded "choice" on Monday would have been graded "choice" on Friday.

Here are some questions and answers about the new standards:

Q. Just how is beef graded?

A. Federally inspected beef is graded according to the age of the animal it comes from and the amount of marbling it has. The beef is graded according to tenderness, juiciness and flavor. Under the new rules, all beef that is graded for quality also has to be graded for yield. That means the inspector will determine how much actual meat a carcass will yield. Meat packers opposing the new standards argued that yield grading would add costs; the USDA says any increase will be "insignificant" maybe about a penny per hundred pounds of meat.

Q. How does marbling differ from regular fat?

A. Marbling is flecks of fat within lean meat as opposed to the solid strip of fat around the meat. Marbling usually disappears during cooking.

Banking complex files bankruptcy

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Hamilton Bancshares Inc., the Chattanooga bank holding company whose major subsidiary was declared insolvent Monday, filed Friday for voluntary bankruptcy in the U.S. District Court for East Tennessee.

In the court petition, Hamilton Bancshares also filed bankruptcy for three nonbanking subsidiaries — Hamilton Mortgage Corp. of Atlanta and Hamilton Financial Services, Inc., and Hamilton Factors, Inc., both of Chattanooga.

"We take this action because of the financial condition of these companies and a desire to see the claims of the companies' creditors liquidated in an orderly fashion," said a Bancshares statement.

Bancshares officials said would survive are Bancshares Life Insurance Co., Bancshares Datafile Corp. and Hamilton Properties Corp., all based in Chattanooga.

Hamilton National Bank of Chattanooga, owned by Bancshares, was declared insolvent by the U.S. comptroller of the currency last Monday. The bank's assets were pur-

Economy spurs record stocks volume

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first decline in retail food prices in five months contributed to a further slowdown in the nation's inflation rate in January, the government reported Friday.

There also were lower prices during the month for gasoline, heating fuels and new cars, while prices rose for postage, auto insurance and medical care.

The Labor Department said overall consumer prices in January rose four-tenths of 1 per cent on a seasonally adjusted basis, down from a five-tenths increase in December.

Meanwhile, the New York Stock Exchange closed Friday at its highest level in more than three years, passing the 40 million-share mark for the first time in the exchange's history in the process.

inflation.

Investors evidently read the dividend increase announced by American Telephone & Telegraph Co. on Wednesday as an expression of strong opti-ports, while opponents will use unfavorable statistics to attack the President.

Progress against inflation was clear in the 12-month figures, which showed consumer prices were up 6.8 per cent in January over a year earlier. That was the lowest 12-month increase since July 1973, when prices had risen by 5.7 per cent.

The Labor Department also had good news for wage earners, reporting that real spendable earnings of workers increased two-tenths of 1 per cent during January and 4.3 per cent for the 12-month period.

The growth in workers' spendable earnings—which are earnings after the effects of taxes and inflation are subtracted—has been a major factor in the nation's steady recovery from recession.

Economic statistics undoubtedly will play a key role in the presidential campaign, with Ford and his advisers trying to get as much mileage as possible out of favorable re-

Consumer price index not for family budget

Associated Press

The ups and downs of the Consumer Price Index provide clues for the experts about the course of the economy, but don't try to translate the statistics into the language of the family budget. It won't work.

Aside from the fact that the index measures only a limited set of items and doesn't include things like taxes, there are other factors to take into account when trying to understand the percentages.

Many of the figures released by the Bureau of Labor Statistics are seasonally adjusted. That means they are increased or decreased to reflect what usually happens at a particular time of the year, like Christmas.

LOOK at the latest figures, released Friday. The Consumer Price Index went from 166.3 in December to 166.7 in January. If you do a little arithmetic, you'll find an increase of two-tenths of 1 per cent. But, says the bureau, the seasonally adjusted increase was four-tenths of 1 per cent.

The bureau computes the seasonally adjusted index for December and the seasonally adjusted index for January, then subtracts and divides. The bureau does not publish the seasonally adjusted indexes. It discloses only the seasonally adjusted increase or decrease.

Once you're used to the idea of seasonal adjustments, you might try translating the monthly rate into an annual one. You can't just multiply by 12. You have to use a formula for compound growth to take into account the fact that the base is changing.

SUPPOSE an item costs $100. It goes up 10 per cent in a month. If you multiply by 12, you get an annual rate of 120 per cent.

You have to remember, however, that the item that costs $100 this month costs $110 next month because of the 10 per cent increase. If you take 10 per cent of $110, you get $11. Add $11 to the $10 for the next base price of $121. At the end of 12 months, the increase in the actual cost will be 210 per cent.

GM to recall 2,000 laid-off plant workers

Knight News Service

DETROIT—General Motors Corp. announced that second-quarter production boosts at two more car assembly plants in May will result in the recall of approximately 2,000 hourly workers from indefinite layoffs.

Approximately 1,000 employees will be recalled at the Pontiac car plant in Pontiac, Mich., and the adjoining Fisher Body plant on May 17 and 24 and another 1,000 at the Linden, N.J., assembly plant, where the second shift will be restored May 17.

The latest change in production planning, the second announced by GM this week, adds another 7,000 to 8,000 cars to the 1,350,000 second-quarter target that GM set earlier this week.

"This (increase) is another firm indicator that our industry is moving steadily forward," GM President E.M. Estes said.

The resumption of second shift operations at Linden reduces to three the number of GM's car assembly plants that remain on single shift operations.

Russian space exploit fails

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON—The Soviet Union apparently failed this week in testing a system for intercepting and destroying satellites, U.S. intelligence sources say.

The test involved only Russian satellites, and no attempt was made to interfere with any U.S. satellites in space, the sources say.

The 1972 Nuclear Arms Limitation agreement forbids Russia and the United States from interfering with each other's spy satellites or any other means of monitoring compliance with that agreement.

However, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger has said the 1972 agreement does not prohibit the Russians from testing an antisatellite system, so long as they don't deploy it.

The United States tried to develop a satellite-killing system, but gave it up in the 1960s. It is reported to have a system for examining potentially hostile satellites which might be armed with nuclear weapons, but not for destroying them.

THE SOVIET test this week was said to have been the first significant one since 1971, when three successful satellite interceptions reportedly were made.

Intelligence sources said the Russians sent up a target satellite, Cosmos 803, on Feb. 12 from their launch base at Tyuratam in the central Soviet Union.

Four days later the Russians fired aloft Cosmos 804, an interceptor, into the same orbital plane as Cosmos 803. The orbit had an apogee of 698 miles and a perigee of 149 miles from earth.

The sources said the apparent attempt to intercept was made over the Soviet Union after Cosmos 804 had completed one orbit.

Experts suggest that its sensors may have malfunctioned and the interceptor did not get close enough to the target satellite to destroy it. They do not know the reason for the apparent failure.

Perils still remain at A-plant, engineer says

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. (AP)—Engineer Dale Bridenbaugh, who participated in tests that preceded the shutdown of the Vermont Yankee Nuclear Plant, said Friday a major accident was still possible at the plant, although modifications now under way would make the plant safer.

Bridenbaugh recommended Vermont Yankee officials for unilaterally shutting down the plant when the safety problems were discovered.

He said the modifications now under way at the plant would correct the most recently discovered safety problems, but the design errors that led to the safety problems would remain.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) allowed the plant to resume operations last week after approving Vermont Yankee's plans to install steel supports to bolster the safety system.

Bridenbaugh appeared at a press conference with two other engineers who resigned recently from the General Electric Co. to dramatize their concern about the safety of nuclear power.

They concentrated their comments on the 540-megawatt Vermont Yankee plant in nearby Vernon.

Bridenbaugh worked on tests of the Vermont plant that showed a safety system for the plant's pressure chamber might not function properly in an accident. The tests led to a recent three-week shutdown of the plant.

'Few decades, few billions' may help project Search for space life fruitless—so far

Knight News Service

BOSTON—Mankind's first systematic search for intelligent life on other planets has produced evidence that the universe might be a lonelier place than had been calculated, scientists reported here Friday.

But, encouraged by the fact that the search is going on at all, astronomers said that there is a fair chance of success, given a few decades and maybe a few billion dollars instead of the platitude they now have.

Speaking at a session on extraterrestrial intelligence at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science here, Carl E. Sagan, director of the laboratory for Planetary Studies at Cornell University, pointed out that quick success can hardly be expected from an effort that is so young and so newly arrived at, scientific respectability.

At Friday's session, there were reports from six groups—two in the Soviet Union, one in Canada and three in the United States—that have been scanning the skies for radio signals from intelligent beings elsewhere in the universe. Nothing has been found.

MOST OF THE GROUPS have been looking for signals from individual stars, Sagan said. Since only about 1,000 stars were scanned, he said, success was unlikely.

There are some 250 billion stars in the galaxy, meaning that several hundred thousand stars may have to be scanned to find one civilization.

More discouraging is the failure of Sagan and another Cornell professor, Frank D. Drake, who both used the world's largest radio telescope in Arecibo, Puerto Rico in a scan of other galaxies.

Drake and Sagan studied three galaxies in the "local cluster" around the galaxy that contains our sun, as well as a far-off galaxy in the constellation Virgo.

"Of the trillion stars in the galaxies we look at, there was not a signal evident at the time of our observation," Sagan said. "This means that no civilization in those galaxies is devoting a major effort to communicate with us at that level."

But Sagan took some cheer from the thought that earthlings still may not know the proper method to communicate with other civilizations and that a more sensitive method could still detect weaker signals.

Better results might be obtained when and if the U.S. commits itself to project Cyclops, a $6-billion array of 250 radio telescopes, each 330 feet wide, devoted to finding another civilization.

Meanwhile, he said, it is discouraging to realize that mankind has unintentionally sent signals to other civilizations—the signals from television broadcasts, which are travelling out into the universe.

"Television signals are our interstellar emissaries," he said. "If you wonder why these beings haven't been here, now you know. They're very intelligent."

Greater airline-price freedom asked

Washington Star

WASHINGTON—Greater pricing freedom for the nation's airlines is likely to produce a huge growth in airline travel and lower fares—possibly savings of up to $200 million a year for airline passengers—a government-sponsored study says.

A draft copy of the report—to be published soon—says greater pricing freedom would likely develop a high-volume, low-cost service on heavily traveled routes.

Such a system, the report says, would have to be accompanied by development of satellite airports. Thus, fares could reflect convenience: low fares for frequent service between Baltimore-Washington International Airport and Newark Airport, with higher fares between Washington's National Airport and LaGuardia in New York.

THE report essentially agrees with Ford administration legislation seeking substantially less regulation of the airlines.

The study was made by Simat, Helliesen & Eichner, Inc., a Boston-based consulting firm specializing in airline work.

The study cost the Department of Transportation less than $10,000 and was completed in two months—although it undoubtedly drew on many years' experience by the consulting firm.

The report says that the experience of highly successful and low-priced intrastate airlines—specifically those in Texas and California—should be put to use nationally.

Airlines in both states have developed into specialized companies that fly large numbers of passengers on heavily traveled routes at lower fares than airlines regulated by the Civil Aeronautics Board.

In each case, satellite airports have aided their success. And fare flexibility in Texas has led to a two-tiered pricing system which has resulted in far greater personal travel by air.

A two-tiered pricing system may mean higher prices in peak travel periods or higher prices to use more convenient airports.

The report concedes there may be some problem with substantial competition in fares because some present fares charged by CAB-regulated airlines subsidize less-profitable routes.

Nevertheless, the report says, there are 60 interstate markets that are similar in distance and traffic density to the Texas and California interstate markets. If airlines were permitted to have rate competition on these routes—specifically a two-tier pricing system—traffic volume would double, with more than 18 million additional passengers each year.

Average savings would be $11 per passenger, or more than $200 million a year at existing levels of business, the report says.

The report added cities that offer promise as a base for such operations include New York, Chicago, Washington-Baltimore, Boston, Pittsburgh, Atlanta, Cleveland, Philadelphia and Detroit.

In Senate testimony

Knight News Service

WASHINGTON—Transportation Secretary William T. Coleman Friday defended his decision to allow the Anglo-French Concorde supersonic jet-liner to land in the United States, saying that if the big plane is to fail it should do so on its own, not because the U.S. banned it.

Testifying before the Senate Aviation subcommittee, Coleman said that the 16-month trial period he has allowed for the Concorde was in the best interests of the U.S. because there are as yet no facts to back up objections to the SST based on excessive noise, commercial viability and possible destruction of the earth's ozone layer.

The six flights a day

that he has allowed—four to New York's John F. Kennedy Airport and two to Dulles International Airport outside Washington—would be conducted under strict controls and limits, Coleman said.

He said that if the trial period should show that Concorde is not economically feasible "in the energy and environmentally conscious period in which we live, the Concorde will fail because it is an anachronism, and its failure will be recognized as such rather than attributed to an arbitrary and protectionist attitude of the U.S. out of fear that our dominance over the world's aeronautical industry is threatened."

Coleman noted that if the flights prove to be too much of a problem, he can suspend them on four months' notice, or any time he decides they represent a threat to the health, safety or welfare of the American people.

"I believe the demonstration period, under the strict controls and limitations set forth in my opinion, is in the national interest," Coleman said.

"I believe we should give the Concorde this limited chance to prove itself."

"If we bar the Concorde completely, we may be condemning for all time or delaying for decades what might be a very significant technological advance for mankind," the Secretary added.

Simon charges UC investment errors

Associated Press

Industrialist Norton Simon said Friday that the University of California's $1.45 billion investment portfolio is being mismanaged, putting the university in the position of a "stock market speculator."

Simon, attending the last meeting of his 16-year term on the Board of Regents, said the university is holding too many unproductive common stocks and low-yield bonds.

Some 60 percent of the university's investable funds, he said, is tied up in common stocks yielding about 3 per cent. Since the university could be getting more than 8 per cent by investing in long-term government bonds, he said, the difference in yield amounts to speculation on the part of the UC trustees.

"There is no assurance that stocks will be capable of producing sufficient future gains to compensate for the substantial loss of current income," he explained.

Simon, who made his comments on the second day of the regents' regular monthly meeting in Los Angeles, called for a review of the portfolio and the creation of a separate Investment Department in the Treasurers Department.

He recommended that a study immediately be undertaken to determine if the state is putting too much money into the pension fund.

In addition to Simon, regents' Chairman Elmer Heller also attended the last meeting of her term. Gov. Brown now must appoint their successors, who will be the first two regents named by him.

attending meetings of the board's Investment Committee in order to learn more about the subject.

The regents are the stewards of the investment money, made up of pension, endowment and other funds. Simon said the fund is "eight times larger than in 1960 when I came onto this board," and he raised the possibility that the university may be overfunding its pension needs.

He recommended that a study immediately be undertaken to determine if the state is putting too much money into the pension fund.

In addition to Simon, regents' Chairman Elmer Heller also attended the last meeting of her term. Gov. Brown now must appoint their successors, who will be the first two regents named by him.

U.S. official raps nuclear Prop. 15

CEDARVILLE (AP)—Most of the teachers in this rural Northern California community have voted to join a union not usually associated with schools—the Teamsters.

A Teamster official said Friday the Surprise Valley Joint Unified School District may be only the first of a number of districts throughout California to affiliate with the giant union under the state's new collective bargaining law.

"Now that they have the right to have contract negotiations, with our experience in the field we can do a better job than a group that has never negotiated a contract," said Rick Haeg.

Haeg is business representative of Teamsters Local 911 in Fresno, which represents local government and professional workers throughout the state. He said it represents 15 to 20 police departments, including San Diego's, and another 10 to 15 fire departments.

The Surprise Valley teachers voted 15-3 to join the Teamsters.

He said teachers in several other districts have contacted the Teamsters. The union won't solicit members but will campaign in districts where it is called in and spend "whatever we need" in the campaigns, Haeg said.

The new law allows teachers to choose a union to represent them in negotiations with school districts.

Expensive, hard-fought campaigns are expected in many districts between the California Teachers Association and the AFL-CIO California Federation of Teachers when representation elections begin in April.

Asked whether the Teamsters expected to unseat the established teacher groups, Haeg said, "I don't think we're going to catch up with them in one year."

Both parties feel Chavez' pressure

KEENE (AP) — Cesar Chavez and his labor allies are trying to put pressure on both political parties to break the deadlock which has halted California's secret-ballot elections for farm workers.

The United Farm Workers said Friday that Chavez had sent a telegram to Mary Louise Smith, head of the Republican National Committee, asking for support, and state AFL-CIO leader John Henning has written to local Democratic chairmen.

REPUBLICANS and rural Democrats are blocking a $3.8-million appropriation the Agricultural Labor Relations Board needs to continue holding secret-ballot elections through June. The holdout legislators are pressing grower demands for changes in the law. Growers' groups contend the ALRB is biased in favor of Chavez' UFW, which has won a majority of the elections.

The state AFL-CIO said Henning has sent telegrams to 18 county Democratic chairmen, including those whose areas are represented by the six Democratic state senators who either opposed the appropriation or abstained.

A bill appropriating the money fell seven votes

short of passage in the state Senate last month.

THE TELEGRAM, also sent to the state and national party chairmen, said Henning was speaking for 1.7 million AFL-CIO members in the state.

It said it was "a disgrace" that Democrats would oppose the appropriation. It asked the chairmen to "remember the great labor coalition which has existed through the years between the AFL-CIO and the Democratic Party."

Asked if that meant the AFL-CIO would campaign against Democrats who opposed the money, a spokesman said, "Mr. Henning believes the telegram speaks for itself."

Recently Henning said the AFL-CIO is considering making the appropriation an issue in this year's elections.

The state fine was announced in Los Angeles Friday, two days after Title Insurance's parent firm, TI Corp., pleaded no contest to the federal charges.

Besides the fines, the company was ordered to end hundreds of bank accounts which the insurance commissioner said it maintained only to influence banks to channel title insurance business its way.

Pesticide spending criticized

SACRAMENTO (AP)—People's Lobby said Friday the State Department of Agriculture creates phony emergencies each year to justify spending $1 million on pesticides.

The self-styled citizens' action group distributed a 214-page book accusing the department of a "$1 million consumer and taxpayer ripoff" in its emergency pest-eradication program.

A department spokesman, Dick Thompson, said the accusation "is so specious we don't know how to respond." He said the department actually saves money on pesticides.

BUT Laura Tallian, author of the book "Politics and Pesticides" distributed by People's Lobby, claimed the department maintains a "slush fund" to buy pesticides needlessly.

"People's Lobby believes that the motivation for this boondoggling in pest eradication arises from the fact that $1 million annually from the state's off-road gasoline tax has been made available to the Department of Food and Agriculture for this use," she said.

She said examples of "boondoggling" included "a million dollars spent in San Diego to saturate Balboa Park with chlordane to kill only 11 Japanese beetles."

People's Lobby urged tight state controls on all pesticide use, and increased use of other insects rather than chemicals to control pests.

THOMPSON said the Balboa Park program and others criticized by Mrs. Tallian reduce total usage of pesticides because it is more efficient to conduct a coordinated spraying program than to have thousands of individuals do it.

"If individuals do it, more pesticides are used, and the unit cost is four or five times higher for the pesticides," he said.

Thompson said the $1 million cited by Mrs. Tallian is part of a $3.5 million annual fund from gasoline sales to farmers to power off-highway equipment.

THE TELEGRAM, also sent to the state and national party chairmen, said Henning was speaking for 1.7 million AFL-CIO members in the state.

It said it was "a disgrace" that Democrats would oppose the appropriation. It asked the chairmen to "remember the great labor coalition which has existed through the years between the AFL-CIO and the Democratic Party."

Asked if that meant the AFL-CIO would campaign against Democrats who opposed the money, a spokesman said, "Mr. Henning believes the telegram speaks for itself."

Recently Henning said the AFL-CIO is considering making the appropriation an issue in this year's elections.

The state fine was announced in Los Angeles Friday, two days after Title Insurance's parent firm, TI Corp., pleaded no contest to the federal charges.

Besides the fines, the company was ordered to end hundreds of bank accounts which the insurance commissioner said it maintained only to influence banks to channel title insurance business its way.

CHURCH WOMEN UNITEDL.B. women to join in day of global prayer

By MRS. JOHN G.
HOEPFL
Past President, Long Beach
Church Women United “Never underestimate the power of a woman.”

This is an old cliché but true — when applied to a group such as the local unit of Church Women United, one of more than 2,000 such groups scattered across the U.S.

On March 5, we will join in a globe-circling chain of prayer with millions of people in many countries. The worship service to be used everywhere was prepared by women in Latin America to reflect their concern for “Education for All of Life.”

Services, all at 10 a.m., are scheduled for First United Methodist Church, 507 Pacific Ave., with Elsie Ferris speaking and with music by Golden West College; Lakewood Village Community Church, 4919 Centralia Ave.; Starr King United Presbyterian, 132 E. Artesia Blvd.; Leisure World Community Church, 14000 Church Place; Seal Beach Leisure World; and Brethren Manor, 3331 Pacific Ave.

COUNTED AS members here are more than 200 women from more than 57 churches who gather in a visible fellowship to witness our faith in Jesus Christ, to go out together into every neighborhood and nation as instruments of reconciling love.

Many denominations, age groups, socioeconomic level and ethnic groups are represented, with active participation by all encouraged. The Long Beach unit is associated with a larger group,

MRS. JOHN G. HOEPFL

Southern California-Southern Nevada Church Women United which, in turn, is a part of the movement on a national level.

CWU the world over holds “Three Great Days” or “Celebrations” annually. In addition to the March 5 Day of Prayer, which begins at dawn on the island of Tonga and continues for 24 hours, there are:

May Fellowship Day, the first Friday of the month. To be celebrated this year is the theme “1776 Valiant Women.” The Long Beach unit will meet at the Salvation Army Temple, with luncheon for about 225 women.

AND World Community Day, the first Friday in November, the third of these, perhaps is the largest and most joyous of our Celebrations.

The first Friday in every month — except March, May and November — is set as forum meetings for our local unit, each held in a different church. Emphasis is placed on providing programs of a challenging and stimulating nature on a variety of serious subpjects — crime, hunger, the aging — and our responsibilities to them.

A few of the local and national concerns shared by CWU women who volunteer time, money and talent are: Meals on Wheels, Fish, Hoffmeyer (halfway) House for women, Inner City Ministries, Long Beach Literacy Council, WICS, National Farm Workers Ministry. Along with Church World Service, American Bible Society and cooperative programs with the Long Beach Council of Churches.

As women we strive to broaden our own outlook,

POSITIVE THINKING

by Norman Vincent Peale

Handling people

“How can I handle a person who dislikes me?”

This question comes from a high school boy who, obviously, is very troubled. “It makes a most embarrassing and difficult situation,” he explains. “Bill and I were formerly good friends.

But he began to cool off and we drifted apart. We are in the same class, go around with the same

crowd, but he hates me like nobody’s business and goes out of his way to show it. What shall I do to handle him?”

A similar question came from one of the most impressive appearing women

I have ever met. She was exquisitely dressed and styled in the latest fashion. I know that her home was beautiful and that she had servants, cars, money, everything she wanted. I also knew that she constantly invited people to teas, dinners, and parties and spared no expense on these functions.

Everyone who is asked goes to them.

That is a very wise observation. Obviously, the verse means that,

in handling people who dislike you, the first step is to get quite inwardly.

When you are quiet inwardly,

you are in a position where no one can make trouble for you. No matter what the other person does, he can’t upset you.

The only quality each of us should cultivate is imperturbability. You can always solve a problem in quietness.

Secondly, you should subject yourself to scrupulous, honest self analysis.

Ask yourself: “What is there in me that reacts so unfavorably on this other person or other people?”

Go over your characteristics carefully and be honest with yourself. Then make a serious effort to cultivate qualities which can make other people like you and get rid of those ways and mannerisms which bring dislike.

Third, practice really and truly having good will toward people. If you love them sincerely enough, they can’t help but love back. Don’t do it out of a desire for popularity, business success of any material objective — but just because you can find qualities in them to love.

If you really love people, they will love you.”

Acquire the inner quietness the Bible teaches.

Learn to know yourself.

And practice loving people. Then you’ll be able to handle people who dislike

you. You’ll change enemies into friends.

LETTERS‘Apologize!’

Religion Editor:

Normally my good intentions of writing letters regarding important issues remain just that, good intentions. I never seem to take time out between commitments in voluntary work in my community and to my family to write them.

However, this week I feel absolutely compelled to take time out of what is no doubt the busiest week of my entire year to respond to your column of Saturday, February 7th. You refer to The Tidings as being “the sexiest newspaper”

In my World Book Dictionary sexy means, and I quote, “sexually appealing or stimulating, having sex appeal”. I challenge you, Mr. Clutter, to produce one article in any of The Tidings publications which falls into this category, particularly in light of the connotation of the word today.

I feel your recent slams to the Catholic Church, and now our official Catholic newspaper reflect your worth as a reliable religion editor.

Perhaps you associate disapproval of our present abortion laws, and speaking out on this issue, as “sexy”. If so, I see a very biased individual, which is certainly a trait which has no place in any religion conscience person, especially a Christian.

With regard to the paper being dull, perhaps you had best re-read your own column of that day. However, I suggest that you do so early in the morning after a good night’s rest.

self-conscious. This becomes especially unfortunate because one of the real purposes in life is to win victories in personal associations.

The three people I have mentioned had one reaction in common... They were brought up, indignant, nervous, on edge. As I thought about their problem, I came across a helpful statement in a letter sent to me by a friendly reader.

This particular reader wrote that a verse had meant a great deal to her and she wondered why she had never heard a sermon on it. Well, I must confess that, although I have read the Bible many times over, this particular passage never caught my attention. It is in the 34th chapter of Job, the 29th verse: “When he giveth quietness, who then can make trouble?”

In North Long Beach

A half-century of service to be remembered

By RALPH HINMAN Jr.
Staff Writer

"The Lord has been good to us..."

In these clearly heartfelt words, Pastor George O. Peek of North Long Beach Brethren Church summed up the 50 years his large and active church has reached out into Northtown life from a still-growing facility on Orange Avenue between 60th and 61st Streets.

It is a half-century to be recalled and relived Sunday, when oldtimers and newer arrivals join in celebrating a significant anniversary. Old pictures, directories and books will abound in church or patio, some of the original members hopefully will attend. It should be a time of laughter. And, perhaps, of a few tears...

Dr. Peek, since 1948 the pastor there, recalled something of his church's history during an interview this week.

He credited, as a starting point, a "small group of people — and two men in particular — from the old First Brethren Church who felt a necessity for organizing a church" in a thinly built-up area far from Long Beach's then more heavily developed regions below Pacific Coast Highway.

"In the fall of 1925, Henry Wall, the Sunday School superintendent, and A. Harry Kirby, a member of the building development committee, came up here and bought two lots at 60th and Orange," Dr. Peek said. Kirby purchased one plot, donating it to the parent church, which simultaneously acquired bought the second lot. Total initial value of both, $8,000.

Construction of an outpost of the originating church at 5th Street and Cherry Avenue (its handsome old structure was destroyed in an arsonist-set fire in 1964), began immediately. The first unit, a sanctuary, pastor's study, kitchen and classrooms, was dedicated on Feb. 7, 1926.

GATHERED FOR the premiere then were 66 worshipers, with 80 youngsters in Sunday School attendance that first day,

Dr. Peek said. His predecessor, founding Pastor Ed Wilson, operated in 1926 with a $4,000 operating budget.

(By comparison, the church's budget this year is $507,000, with over 1,000 persons attending sanctuary services and 1,500 Sunday School enrollees. Where Wilson and perhaps a solitary secretary were the staff, the church now is served by 12 fulltime workers, including four ministers. Thus in a half-century.)

For two years this remained an outpost church, finally reorganizing with a charter membership of 66 into "Second Brethren Church of Long Beach" on Jan. 1, 1928. A three-story Christian Education addition later would be completed at a cost of $12,000 shortly after the stock market crash of autumn 1929 heralded a coming major economic catastrophe.

THE SECOND major addition, today's handsome sanctuary, was completed in 1958. And a new Sunday School wing was finished in September 1968.

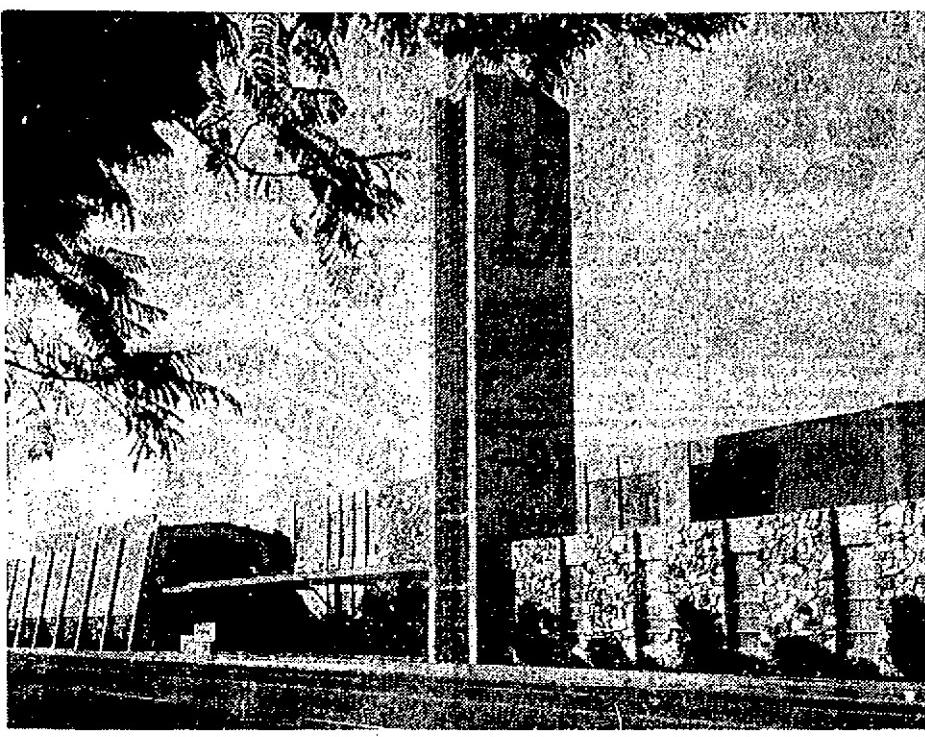

Dr. Peek, 63, who grew up in Long Beach and was a police officer here prior to entering the ministry, obviously was proud of North Long Beach Brethren's physical accomplishments. Yet, clearly, his greatest joy was in what he called a "for real family spirit" permeating the church across the decades since its formation.

He'll talk willingly, even eagerly, about church activities in such vital fields as Christian education, youth work in general, sa-

Nearly 100 worshippers were present for the first Sunday service a half-century past in a small, new church depicted at the top of a dedicatory program, reproduced at left.

Now, 50 years later, a vastly larger congregation may join in North Long Beach Brethren Church's golden anniversary celebration, to be held Sunday in a large and handsome edifice at 61st Street and Orange Avenue.

George and Mabel, that is — arrived in 1948, church and Sunday School memberships stood respectively at 235 and 250. Expansion was in the wind as postwar America girded itself for what has been called the "religious revival" of the 1950s.

Yet it is this family feeling that may well count most in his mind.

Two or three generations often are represented in today's services, he said. Yesterday's Sunday Schoolers are contemporary leaders, for "We believe in plowing back our young blood into the leadership."

Pastor smiled broadly. "I've always said the way to tell how a church is growing is to see if it has fresh paint and a lot of babies around. We believe in keeping this place clean and neat — and there sure are a lot of youngsters in Sunday School!"

And I will set up one shepherd over them, and he shall feed them, even my servant David; He shall be their shepherd. Ezekiel 34:23.

And Isaac's servants dug in the valley, and found there a well of springing water. Genesis 26:19.

inside the church should be as we think they should be. This 'shunning' sounds like a most unsaintly, unChristian, unforgiving, unloving practice. Bad enough when a person leaves a church on his own, but worse and absolutely unforgivable when the 'saints' push him out.

I know you don't want to be accused of preaching in your column, but I think you could have pointed out that by our deeds we are followers of Christ and by our dealings with our fellow men. The annals of history record some of the most cruel, inhuman wars and practices perpetrated in the name of Christ, love, and what's good for the rest of mankind!

Ben Peters top country song writer

NASHVILLE (AP) — Ben Peters, who co-authored the award-winning song "Before the Next Teardrop Falls," has been named Songwriter of the Year by the Nashville Songwriters Association. Peters, a songwriter and publisher, received the association's ninth annual award for a number of songs, including "Love Put a Song in My Heart" and "All Over Me."

Peters teamed up with Vivian Kelth in writing "Before the Next Teardrop Falls," and both were honored with the association's Outstanding Achievement Award. Freddy Fender's recording of this song won the Country Music Association's 1975 "Single of the Year" award.

"I'm just flabbergasted," said Peters, who started his own publishing company here about 10 years ago. "A lot of good things have happened to me in the business but nothing has ever topped this."

Other award winners and songs for which they were recognized were:

— Larry Butler and Chips Moman: "Hey Won't You Play Another Somebody Done Somebody Wrong Song."

— Jessi Colter: "I'm Not Lisa."

— John Denver: "Back Home Again."

— Dolly Parton: "Kentucky Gambler," "The Seeker" and "The Bargain Store."

— Fred Rose (posthumous): "Blue Eyes Crying In the Rain."

— John Schaefer: "Daydreams About Night Things."

"soldiers" William and Emily Harris would have had her killed if she tried to surrender to authorities.

"They aren't the only people running around who are like that," she said. "I've heard of other people and seen others. There were many other people who could have picked up where they left off, and if they wanted me killed, all they had to do was say it."

Browning then asked her what led her to believe that the Harrises, arrested with Miss Hearst last fall, could exercise such power.

"It's happening right now, Mr. Browning," she declared, sobbing.

"What do you mean, Miss Hearst?" Browning fired back. Then he sought to retract his question, but was overruled by the judge after Miss Hearst's attorney, F. Leg Bailey, insisted she be allowed to answer.

"San Simeon was bombed," Miss Hearst announced tearfully. "My parents received a letter threatening my life if I took the witness stand, and threatening their lives if I took the witness stand, and they wanted a quarter of a million dollars put in the Bill and Emily Harris defense fund."

Browning asked who had made this threat, and Miss Hearst said, "The New World Liberation Front."

The jury thus heard news that had been carefully cut out of their newspaper eight days before.

Bailey failed earlier in the week to win permission for Miss Hearst to mention the bombing. The judge said that current threats to the Hearst family had no relevance to the bank robbery for which she is on trial.

The explosion caused an estimated $1 million damage to a palatial guest house at the castle, erected by publishing baron William Randolph Hearst, Miss Hearst's grandfather. Security around the Hearst family was tightened after the threatening message was received by news media from the mysterious NWLF.

As the cross-examination wound up, Miss Hearst offered details about her travels with sports activist Jack Scott, whom she described as a "ripoff artist" enamored of the SLA. And she tearfully rebuffed Browning's efforts to portray her as an accomplished actress who could play any role to save her skin.

After Miss Hearst spoke of the bombing, Browning entered in evidence against her a "communique" from the NWLF, which, he said, was found in her kitchen on the day she was arrested.

"I knew there were some things from New Dawn in the apartment," she explained, referring to a Bay area radical collective which disseminates radical literature. "Jim Kilgore brought over a whole handful of things from New Dawn."

Kilgore was the house-painting partner of Steven Sollah, who shared Miss Hearst's last hideout. He is wanted on a federal warrant in connection with a bomb found and disarmed a few hours after Miss Hearst's arrest.

No arrests have been made in the San Simeon bombing, but the Chicago Tribune reported Friday that Kilgore, 29, had been seen at the castle just before the explosion. The FBI denied the report, however.

Much of the morning session of the 18th day of Miss Hearst's bank robbery trial was occupied by Browning's questions about the Scotts' role in Miss Hearst's flight from capture. He appeared particularly interested in where Scott obtained money for his travels with fugitives.

"My understanding of where he got it was that he was some kind of ripoff artist with credit cards and buying furniture on time and maneuvers like that," she said. "And he had something called the Institute for Sport and Society and he would get contributions for that."

But what was Scott's reward, Browning asked, for helping Miss Hearst flee? "He said he was going to pay for everything," she said. "What he wanted out of it was — he said he wanted a chance to struggle with the people in the SLA."

Miss Hearst, who had wept profusely throughout much of Browning's earlier questioning, regained her composure as she told of her cross-country trips with Scott and his parents.

Scott, 34, emerged as a figure in the Hearst case with the disclosure that he was under investigation by a federal grand jury in Pennsylvania for possibly harboring Miss Hearst.

He and members of his family have refused to testify before the panel, and a federal prosecutor there said that he intended to reopen the investigation with testimony from Miss Hearst after her trial.

A one-time track star at Syracuse University, Scott is the author of works critical of the sports establishment. Miss Hearst has testified that he wanted to write a book about the SLA.

It was Scott and his wife, Micki, she said Friday, who introduced her to Wendy Yoshimura, the Japanese-American artist arrested with her last Sept. 18. She reported for the first time that Scott also had provided an underground railroad service for Miss Yoshimura.

"Jack Scott had talked about her on the trip across country," she recalled. "He said he had helped her get across the country, too ... He used to know some of the people she used to know."

"There was an arrest. Her boyfriend got arrested, and he (Scott) said that that night Micki had gone to her apartment and helped clear it out, and he had taken Wendy Yoshimura to Los Angeles and had flown her across the country."

By the time the two women met at Scott's New York apartment, Miss Hearst said, she knew that the artist was a fugitive from bomb and weapons possession charges in Berkeley. Eventually, she said, Miss Yoshimura became her only friend, urging her to contact her parents while on the run.

"Did Wendy offer to help you get in touch with your parents?" Browning asked.

"Yes," Miss Hearst answered. She acknowledged, however, that she did not make the effort.

"I couldn't do it then in San Francisco," she said, citing fear of SLA "soldiers" William and Emily Harris, who were living three miles away.

Ford's broader approach, he said, is "a dragnet that reaches out to many thousands of executive branch employees" and tries to prevent them from disclosing "matters that ought to be made public."

Miss Hearst denied that Scott also had urged her to contact her family several times — a report which was published earlier this year in Rolling Stone magazine.

Scott, she said, never brought up the subject.

"I saw two weapons in their apartment in New York," Miss Hearst testified. "Those were the same weapons they took to the farmhouse in Pennsylvania," another SLA hideout.

Browning, seeking to cast doubt on Miss Hearst's portrait of herself as unwilling bank robber and terrorized captive, elicited her admission that the SLA thought of her as a comrade.

Q. You convinced them you were with them, that you were part of them, didn't you?

A. Yes ...

Q. So to a large degree you were acting at that time, weren't you?

A. Yes ...

Q. Are you a good actress, would you say?

A. No.

Q. Are you acting now?

A. shouted objection from Miss Hearst's attorney prevented her answer, sustained by the judge, and the defendant began to grow tearful. Browning then tried to show that

Miss Hearst was held by the SLA in a closet much larger than one she described under oath.

"Are you sure that's not the closet you were kept in?" asked the prosecutor.

"I'm absolutely positive," she said, sobbing.

Moments later, Browning again tried to show her acting ability in the bank robbery with which she is charged.

"You were pretty much acting the part of a bank robber, weren't you?" he asked.

"Yes, I guess so," said Miss Hearst.

But she clung to her contention that she was in fear of death every moment of that robbery.

To prevent abuse Court curbs FBI's files

WASHINGTON (AP) —

The FBI was ordered Friday to seek new methods of preventing its 21.4 million criminal files from being unfairly used to damage the reputations of people with police records.

However, U.S. District Court Judge Lewis Smith Jr. stopped short of directing the agency to erase all out-of-date or incorrect entries from its files.

Balancing personal rights with the valid needs of the criminal justice system, the court cannot order the wholesale expungement or nondissemination of criminal records not meeting an arbitrary temporary yardstick, the judge said.

On request, FBI "rap sheets" are circulated to police forces, courts, prosecutors, banks and federal and some non-federal employers.

forms in its system of keeping records. Court records showed Tarlton's file carried arrest records more than 20 years old.

For the past two years individuals have been allowed to obtain copies of their FBI criminal files for a nominal fee and 2,145 persons have done that, the judge said.

He noted that nearly 70 per cent of the FBI's criminal records include at least one arrest without showing if the person was convicted or if the charge was dropped.

Smith ordered the agency to find new ways "to keep the disposition entries in its criminal records reasonably current," especially for arrest records more than a year old.

Besides that, the judge said, any challenge to the accuracy of an FBI file must be sent to a local police force or court for possible correction. He also ordered the FBI to gradually remove all entries of non-serious offenses like drunkenness, vagrancy, traffic violations and juvenile crimes.

To some extent, the FBI has already begun doing that, he said.

While the judge declined to issue a broad order sought in Tarlton's suit, he said the FBI is much more than a mechanical keeper of records.

"The FBI is not merely a repository for records but is also the focal point of a vast, nationwide distribution network," Smith said in a 15-page opinion.

"An individual's arrest record — whether accurate or inaccurate — can have far-reaching social, judicial and economic consequences."

actions taken by the executive branch."

Church added that he would support a new, "narrow" law providing criminal penalties for present or former government employees who reveal the names of U. S. intelligence agents or their methods. But that law should be restricted only to employees in the intelligence community who are required in advance to take an oath of secrecy, the senator declared.

He said the President should let Congressional watchdogs in on secret plans "at the time of the takeoff instead of just before the crash landing, especially as most of these operations have ended in failure."

Congressional overseers could add their political judgment on undercover plans concocted by professional spies whose careers depend on mounting such ventures, regardless of long-term consequences, Church argued.

He said Congress should act to prohibit the CIA from using the press, at home and abroad, American missionaries and foreign arms of U.S. educational institutions.

POLLUTION

remarks were based.

"We had to get the tables over the telephone," Daly said, "and we really haven't finished evaluating them."

Daly added that of the plant's "about 600" storage tanks, 167 are "floating-roof tanks" — the type mentioned in Quinn's report. He added that the report did not allege leakage from all of those tanks.

Quinn said Standard Oil could be subject to thousands of dollars in fines if the pollution charges are legally proved. In addition, some company officials could conceivably receive jail sentences if it is determined that the pollution was the result of intentional or gross negligence.

But she clung to her contention that she was in fear of death every moment of that robbery.

"If anything had happened at that bank or at any other time," she said, "I was always their ticket to get out of anything. I was the hostage."

She conceded that before the SLA abandoned its San Francisco hideout, she had joined others in scrawling messages on the walls because "Everybody just was writing on the walls."

Browning's cross-examination was ended "tentatively" because he is awaiting rulings by U.S. District Court Judge Oliver J. Carter on evidence the government wants to bring before the jury.

Hampshire Friday afternoon, after resting all week in California, to make his final push in his opening primary confrontation with the President.

His disclosure about the Cabinet offers appeared to be a matter of deaf timing, coming as it did only hours after the President had left the state after two days of campaigning.

A conclusion that seemed inescapable was that Reagan had carefully withheld any mention of Ford's attempts to bring him into the administration until he could drop it when it would have an optimum impact.

He said he had rejected the offers by telling Ford that "in my last several years as governor I had been looking forward to getting out on what I called the mangled potato circuit, using the media; writing, speaking out on what I call the political-economic mythology that is so widespread today."

A young man rose to remind Ford that he had characterized Nixon's trip as merely another of some 10,000 to China by American private citizens. If so, the young man asked, "why was it" that 18 months earlier Ford had not treated Nixon "as any other American and have him face criminal charges in the same way as any other American would, instead of pardoning him?"

In the hush that followed the bold question, Ford repeated his contention that the only way to erase the Watergate problem from the nation's focus and concentrate on economic and diplomatic issues was to grant the pardon.

And, with a trace of asperity in his voice, Ford said:

"As far as penalty is concerned, the former President obviously resigned in disgrace. That is a pretty severe penalty. One out of 37 presidents had that happen to him."

If the remark was meant to indicate both Ford's irritation over the

L.B. rights unit wants Lowe case file made public

By DON BRACKENBURY
Staff Writer

The Long Beach Human Relations Commission wants copies of the city's report on the Jan. 1 West Long Beach shootout in which a police officer and two brothers died.

The commissioners said they want to see the report as soon as it is available, but they were told by a deputy city manager that the report has not been released because of possible litigation.

Officer Gary Elkins, 34, was killed early New Year's morning as he approached the house of Kennedy Lowe, 33, of 2816 Easy Ave. in response to reports of a prowler in the area.

Kennedy, who gunned down Elkins as the officer walked up to the door, was killed in the resulting siege and shootout, according to police.

His brother, Gene, 28, was shot by a police marksman while attempting to surrender after the shootout had ended.

Three days after the incident, Police Chief Ralph G. Kortz issued a statement admitting that Gene Lowe was mistakenly shot while trying to surrender.

Kortz called his death regrettable, but said there would be no disciplinary action taken against the officer who shot him because the marksman believed the younger Lowe was trying to escape. It later was determined that Gene had nothing to do with Elkins' death.

During a meeting Thursday, Human Relations Commissioner Eddie Bernard said questions had been raised about the incident but that he had not seen any copies of an official investigation report.

B. W. "Jack" O'Neil, deputy city manager and ex officio member of the commission, said the official city report has not been released because of litigation expected to arise from the incident.

Copies of the report would be available to commissioners as soon as the litigation is settled, O'Neil said.

Commissioner Rudy Moreno said he felt the commission should let the public know that it will be monitoring the matter, commenting that "the community wants reassurance there will be no whitewash."

"I think we can give assurance to the community that when we get the report, we will study it and see if there is any area we feel needs further investigation," said commission Chairman Gene Hoffman.

Rev. John E. Clement, 3260 Chestnut Ave., said he felt the commissioners should be sitting in on investigations into the shooting.

He suggested that it ask one of its subcommittees to review the ordinance which created the Human Relations Commission to see if commission powers might not be expanded.

Bus-line extensions to improve service

Seven route extensions on lines of the Long Beach Public Transportation Co. are scheduled to take effect Sunday as part of a joint program with the Southern California Rapid Transit District to improve bus service to the north of the city.

The changes involve the Mid-Cities Transit Plan, which was worked out by the RTD and various local transit lines, including Long Beach. The plan seeks to eliminate duplication of services and connect local lines to the RTD systems.

THE RTD, said William F. Farrell, general manager of the Long Beach Public Transportation Company, has created cross-town service on Artesia Boulevard, Alondra Boulevard, Compton Boulevard and Rosecrans Avenue, and also extended its north-south lines to the south.

The Long Beach bus lines basically will be extended north and east to connect to the RTD lines and also to link more areas with downtown Long Beach and with other shopping centers, Farrell said.

He said the changes have been in the planning stage for nearly a year, and have been approved by the Long Beach bus company's board of directors, the Citizens Advisory Transportation Committee of Long Beach and the city's Bureau of Franchises.

The changes are:

—Route No. 1 is to be extended from Palo Verde Avenue and Cudlewood Street to the Cerritos Shopping Center.

—Route No. 1-Studebaker Road is to be extended east from the Navy Hospital on Carson Street to Norwalk Boulevard, where it will service a new section of Long Beach, instead of using a narrow residential street on Pioneer Boulevard.

—Route No. 2-Cherry Avenue will be extended north to Alondra Boulevard to make connection with the RTD's new crosstown line on Alondra.

—Route No. 2 which operates on Downey Boulevard also is to be extended north to connect to the RTD's Alondra crosstown line.

—Route No. 7-Orange Avenue will be extended north from 71st Street to Rosecrans Avenue to connect with the RTD's crosstown line along that street.

—Route No. 8-Woodruff Avenue will be extended north from Ashworth Street to the RTD's Alondra crosstown line.

—Route No. 15, the Long Beach bus company's crosstown line on Del Amo Boulevard, will be extended into the Lakewood Shopping Center so that passengers will not have to walk across Del Amo Boulevard to get to the center.

Under study, Farrell said, is a new service from downtown Long Beach to the new California State University and Colleges headquarters building at the foot of Golden Shore. The building currently is under construction.

Farell said the Long Beach bus system now operates 5.5 million miles a year. The new extensions will increase this to 6.3 million miles annually, he added.

American folklore festival slated for Feb. 28 at LBSU

An American Folklore Festival, featuring activities ranging from international folk dancing to talks by folklore experts, will be held at Long Beach State University Feb. 28.

Among the performers will be Shony Alex Braun, gypsy violinist, and the Ballet Folklorico of Poly High School.

Alan Dundes of UC Berkeley, author of "Urban Folklore from the Paperwork Empire," will speak on "Folklore in the Modern World." Sam Hinton, a folksinger since vaudeville times and now a UC San Diego professor, is also on the day's agenda.

At 7 p.m., Charles Galt and the LBSU international folk dance club will give demonstrations and instruction in folk dances from several lands. There'll be folk dancing for everyone at 8 p.m.

The day-long festival is sponsored by the college's comparative literature department and the Long Beach Folk Life Center.

The day's activities will begin with a hospitality hour at 9 a.m. Dundes will speak at 9:30 a.m. and Hinton at 10 a.m.

Braun will perform at 11:30 a.m. Ethnic food will be served in the cafeteria afterwards.

Folk performances and workshops will fill the afternoon. Presentations range from martial arts demonstration to a talk on barrio art.

EMBRODEN WORKS ON GLASS-FIBER HULL AT HIS LONG BEACH WORKSHOP

L.B. boyhood dream may come true—best land yacht ever built

By DICK EMERY
Staff Writer

In 1972 he went to see a European land-sailer tournament.

"In Europe they've had boats with wheels for maybe 200 years," he said. "I borrowed one, and they allowed me to race it in a Belgian contest. I knew I could improve on the design, and when I got back home I started work on what has turned out to be a three-year project."

Between classes, Nord has designed what he believes will be a super land yacht, the best racing land yacht ever built. First he had to make a prototype, the model around which a mold could be formed for shaping glass-fiber and sprayed plastic hulls.

"In 1973 I took my first racing yacht to France and competed in European championships which are run by the Federation of Sand and Land Yachts. It was at Le Touquet, France. I placed 13th out of 26 in my class."

"I came home and pitched in, really working on my super model."

He says he worked by daylight and by floodlight and his friends helped. On weekends he went land-yachting at dry lakes in the desert and at Fountain Valley's Mile Square Park.

A few days ago the first hull was lifted out of the mold he had constructed with countless hours of careful work.

"Isn't that a sumpin!" exclaimed the 26-year-old designer.

His friends watched and nodded. Not one could even speak.

Belmont Shore

Buildings alter fire protection plans

By ROBERT GORE
Staff Writer

The new Marina Pacifica condominium project and two new shopping centers east of Pacific Coast Highway have changed fire protection plans for the Belmont Shore area, according to Fire Chief Virgil Jones.

Because of the height of the condominiums, an aerial ladder truck with a 100-foot reach will be added for the shore, Jones said.

In order to further improve the fire protection and to accommodate the $95,000 truck, a new $350,000 station will be built west of Marina Drive at Yacht Basin 3, immediately south of Marina Pacifica.

A pumper truck and a fire boat, transferred from other stations, will join the new truck, Jones said.

His friends watched and nodded. Not one could even speak.

Average response time to a fire, once a call is received, according to Jones, is 2.2 minutes. The closest ladder truck is currently at least 4 minutes away from the Marina Pacifica area, he noted.

The station is to be completed in about 10 months to a year.

"There are some holes in our response time, but they are not a big problem," said John Williams, an executive assistant to the city manager, who is helping with the new protection plan.

The shore now is served by four stations: 8, 5365 E. Second St.; 4, 411 Loma Ave.; 22, 5340 Atherton St. and 2, 1645 E. Third St.

Jones said that station 2 will be closed and the pumper moved to the new station. Station 8, the only facility actually in the shore, will remain in service with its one pumper unit.

Belmont Shore presents several unique problems in fire fighting, Jones explained.

The narrow streets can hamper the movement of equipment, but the main problems are traffic jams and illegal parking, he said. All traffic signals along Second Street between Livingston and Bayshore drives can be turned red or green by a switch in the fire trucks, he said, which aids movement through heavy traffic.

Illegal parkers have blocked streets, alleys, driveways and other crucial entrances, Jones noted.

Although the houses present no height problem, they are located close together, which allows fire to jump from roof-to-roof, Jones said.

The fireboats move up the canals to fight fires in the marina, he said.

An experimental $270,000 fireboat is being tested in the marina, Jones said. There are some problems with the boat, he acknowledged, but he expects they will be corrected.

Time wasted in court said to cost taxpayers $600,000 in police pay

It costs Long Beach taxpayers about $600,000 a year in overtime for police officers called to testify in court, because they spend hours awaiting their turn and some never get to the witness stand at all, City Manager John R. Mansell said Friday.

For all of the cities in Los Angeles County combined, this cost probably runs several million dollars a year, Mansell said.

"Government at present is in a precarious financial position," he said. "To have this abuse of the courts continue is utterly ridiculous."

Mansell said it's time for judges, prosecutors and defense attorneys to get together and stop the wasted time of police officers and the unnecessary cost to cities.

"If the county wants to keep on shilly-shallying about this, it should pick up this cost from the cities."

Legal Aid gets $351,875 U.S. grant

The Legal Aid Foundation of Long Beach has received a $351,875 federal grant, assuring salaries for about half its regular staff of attorneys, local officials have announced.

Rollback to 10c-mail rate eyed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three federal judges Friday began considering whether to order a temporary rollback in the cost of mailing a letter from 13 to 10 cents.

Judge Spottswood W. Robinson III said the temporary rollback, if granted, "could create a good deal of confusion in this country."

Robinson said the postal service, under the complicated rate-making procedures, could restore the present rates by around March 18.

Justice Department attorney Ronald R. Glantz, representing the postal service, agreed with the judge. "It would be intolerable to go back to the 10-cent stamp for less than 30 days," he said.

THE SUIT was brought by the Associated Third Class Mailers, whose members are spending millions of dollars extra in postal rates at the higher level.

J. Edward Day, attorney for the third-class mailers, argued that the board of governors of the postal service did not comply with all technical requirements of the law in raising the rates.

The postal service filed for the higher rates Sept. 18 and put them into effect on a temporary basis Dec. 31.

The financially troubled agency contends it would lose $7 million a day under any rollback. It also had said that it might not be able to meet its payroll if rates are lowered.

The court also heard arguments by the National Association of Greeting Card Publishers that the 10-cent rate was improperly made permanent last September.

Matthew S. Perlman, representing the publishers, said the postal service overcharges the first-class-mail user in order to subsidize business mailers.

PERLMAN said the first-class rate should have been set at 8½ cents while second, third and fourth-class rates should have been increased substantially.

"The postal service is transferring income from the individual consumer to the business users of the mail," he said.

Postal service attorney Jim Finch disputed this, saying the agency "is not out to do in the first-class mailers and benefit everyone else."

The judges did not say when they would issue their opinion, but a court official indicated it probably would be more than a week away.

Trio charged in 1957 Alabama Klan slaying

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Three Montgomery men were charged Friday with first-degree murder in connection with the 1957 Ku Klux Klan slaying of a 25-year-old black truck driver, State Atty. Gen. Bill Baxley announced.

The arrests resulted "indirectly from work on the Birmingham church bombing," said Baxley, referring to a 1963 bombing in which four young black girls were killed.

Baxley said the slain truck driver, Willie Edwards Jr. of Montgomery, was driving a supermarket truck back to Montgomery on the night of Jan. 23, 1957, "when a carload of Klu Klux Klansmen stopped him."

EDWARDS' body was recovered from the Alabama River in Lowndes County three months later, said Baxley, adding that the cause of death was drowning.

The attorney general identified the three men as William "Sonny" Kyle Livingston, 38, a bail bondsman; James York, 73, a retired city sanitation worker, and Henry Alexander, 46, a plumbing contractor.

There is no statute of limitations on first-degree murder in Alabama.

The three, who were arrested by state troopers Friday, were held without bail pending arraignment in Circuit Court.

ALL THREE had been indicted in connection with racial violence that flared in Montgomery in January 1957, following the U.S. Supreme Court decision integrating the Montgomery city bus system. Prior to that decision, the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. had led a year-long boycott of city buses, an action that launched his nonviolent civil rights crusade.

Four black churches and the homes of two ministers were bombed on the night of Jan. 10, 1957. One of the ministers was the Rev. Ralph David Abernathy, who later became president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

Livingston was acquitted on a charge of bombing one of the churches; the charges against York and Alexander, who were indicted for the Abernathy bombing, were then dropped.

Baxley said Edwards' slaying appeared to be a case of mistaken identity.

"Another driver had earlier...smiled at a white woman, so they were laying for him," Baxley said of Edwards' assailants.

"It was his first day on the job."

Although Baxley indicated there was no "direct connection" between Friday's arrests and the Birmingham church bombing, he said both were "Klan-related."

"We've been working on several unsolved civil rights murders for a number of years," Baxley told reporters in his office, saying Friday's arrests should serve as a warning to those involved in the Birmingham bombing.

Vanover was being held without bail in the Fayette County Jail.

"To be perfectly honest, I don't remember what happened," he said in an interview at the jail.

Although Vanover described himself as an itinerant who has lived in several cities, he said he had known Mrs. Strohl for five years.

"We've always been good friends," Vanover said. "We could always call one another and cry on each other's shoulders if we had to."

He said he visited Mrs. Strohl in the hospital "every day and sometimes twice a day."

Vanover said he was questioned by police for nearly 14 hours before charges were placed against him. "They didn't threaten me or challenge me, but they kept bringing things up over and over, and after a while I believed it myself," he said.

"But now that I've had some rest, I don't feel that I did it, and I don't feel they can prove it, but it's too late now that I have been charged."

Vanover said he was on his way to visit Mrs. Strohl about 8:30 p.m. Thursday when university police arrested him. Police said they had been waiting to make an arrest, but would not elaborate.

Vanover has lived alone in Lexington since Jan. 12, he said, and earlier spent short periods of time in Miami and Detroit.

Convict-mother fights to get tot into prison

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A convict-mother is required by law to allow her to leave her infant son with her in prison.

San Francisco Superior Court Judge John Benson took the matter under submission after hearing arguments in the class action suit from the state and from attorneys for Barbara Cardell, 20, an inmate at the California

Institution for Women since last May.

She had asked the court to order prison officials and the state Health and Welfare Agency to let the child, born last Dec. 24, live with her.

Attorneys Patti Roberts and Pauline Tesler told the judge that the state penal code section providing that incarcerated mothers may have their infants with them until the child reaches the age of 2 is mandatory.

Deputy Atty. Gen. Harriet Wisschirch countered that the 1929 law is permissive and declared that research still under way showed that in the 47 years it has been on the books "only three mothers have requested their children remain with them in prison."

She said there was no indication any such requests had been approved.

In the present case, she contended, administrative remedies had not been exhausted because no request had been made to the Women's Board of Terms and Parole.

The inmate's lawyers contend — and the state denied — that there was nothing in evidence to substantiate the reasons the prison superintendent offered for refusing to allow her to have the child with her and thus there had been an abuse of discretion.

The superintendent had said a prison is not a proper place for a child, that it would be dangerous at the time because of riots at the institution and that to have children there would be a disruptive force affecting security and safety.

Bartender 'guilty' in wife death

SANTA ROSA (AP) — A jury convicted a Marysville bartender Friday of first-degree murder in the throat-slashing of his estranged wife a year ago.

The defendant, Cory Emmett Schroeder, 30, listened impassively to the verdict, but his mother burst into tears during a polling of the jury and was comforted by her husband, Jack Schroeder.

Sonoma County Superior Court Judge Richard Hoenig ordered a probation office investigation and report and set sentencing for March 5.

Defense attorney A. J. Carrion said he would file a notice of appeal.

The jurors got the case Thursday afternoon, recessed overnight after deliberating about 1½ hours and deliberated another 1½ hours Friday before arriving at a verdict.

On Friday morning the jurors asked to review testimony of five witnesses, including Schroeder, and also asked the judge to repeat instructions on the distinction between first and second-degree murder.

The trial, which began Feb. 3, was moved here from Yuba County on a change of venue.

On the witness stand, Schroeder denied that he killed his estranged wife, Terri Michelle, 23, who had filed for divorce three months before her body was found in an alley near the Marysville police station last Feb. 26. Schroeder said he had spent that night drinking at taverns in the area.

Mrs. Schroeder was killed shortly after she left her job as a cocktail waitress at a Marysville bar. There were no witnesses and no murder weapon was found.

Incarcerated youths increase during '75

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Admissions to state institutions for youthful offenders jumped 13.5 per cent last year, the California Youth Authority said Friday.

The CYA said 3,402 persons were placed in its institutions during 1975, compared with 3,002 in 1974. It was the third straight year of increase.

But admissions were well below the record of 6,190 in 1965, before the start of a new policy shifting many offenders to local programs, the CYA said.

IT ALSO said institutional population increased 3.5 per cent, from 4,431 to 4,587.

The average length of stay increased from 12.4 to 12.7 months for the 4,380 males and from 11.6 to 12.2 months for the 227 females.

However, the CYA's total number of wards — inmates plus parolees — declined by 3.5 per cent because of a 7.3 per cent drop in the parole case load.

The CYA said it had 7,963 parolees at the end of 1975, compared with 8,585 a year earlier.

Another decrease was in the number of parole violators returning to institutions, a 12 per cent drop from 1,615 to 1,415.

Doctor's murder case still pending

By JOANNE NORRIS
Staff Writer

Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald of Long Beach still faces the possibility of a government appeal or a request for a rehearing in the Jan. 24 dismissal of murder charges against him, and he may have up to 80 more days to ponder his fate.

MacDonald, head of emergency services for St. Mary Medical Center, had been charged with the 1970 murder of his wife and two small daughters at Ft. Bragg, N.C.

But indictments were ordered dismissed by the U.S. Fourth District Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., on grounds he had been denied a speedy trial.

MacDonald said Friday that alleged threats against him made by his wife's stepfather, Alfred Kassab of Long Island, haven't been carried out.

He said his attorney, Bernard Segal of San Francisco, has contacted the FBI, other Justice Department officials and the New York police about Kassab's statements. Segal has asked that Kassab's gun permit be taken away, but MacDonald said authorities won't say whether it has been.

Kassab, who sought reopening of the case after MacDonald had been cleared of charges earlier following a military inquiry, said when the charges were dismissed last month he would "administer justice" himself.

In a telephone interview at the time of the dismissals, Kassab said, "If they (federal prosecutors) don't act and act fast, I am going to take things into my own hands. If they don't do something, I'm going to administer justice myself."

MacDonald explained that the government has been granted a 15-day extension of its 30-day time limit to request that the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals review its findings. It can ask that the same three judges or the whole circuit panel of seven judges take another look at the dismissal order. MacDonald said his attorney thinks this will be unlikely.

However, the government also has 60 days from the dismissal date to appeal the action to the U.S. Supreme Court and can request a 30-day extension of this time

Brown gave felons Christmas pardons

By DOUG WILLIS

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Brown issued pardons to 19 ex-felons last Christmas Eve, a report issued by the governor's office says.

Throughout his first full year in office, the Democratic governor issued only one other pardon, an Aug. 22 pardon to a man convicted 19 years earlier of two counts of writing fictitious checks.

Brown's Christmas Eve pardons, which have not been previously announced, marked a return to a tradition established by his father, former Gov. "Pat" Brown, who saved up pardons each year for Christmas Eve announcements.

RONALD REAGAN, who succeeded the senior Brown in 1967, abandoned the practice of publicly announcing pardons, and he spaced them out with other routine business throughout the year.

"WE DIDN'T sit down and decide Christmas Eve would be the date. We had been working on them for some time, and the governor had time then. I'm not sure we'll do it again that way," she said.

She said no pardons have been signed by Brown since Dec. 24, although one issued at that time was not completed until this year due to legal requirements.

The younger Brown retained the Reagan practice of not announcing pardons. But the lists of pardons are available on request, as required by law.

Brown's list of 20 pardons is significantly shorter than the pardons listed by Reagan — 84 pardons during his last year in office and a total of 597 over eight years.

But Alice Lytle, Brown's deputy legal affairs secretary, said there was no significance in the lower number in 1975.

"It just turned out to be 20," she said.

Mrs. Lytle also said it was not entirely deliberate that the pardons were issued on Christmas Eve although "we were aware of the date and the tradition."

"The responses were often very emotional. One man said, 'Excuse me but I'm going to cry,'" she said.

She said no pardons have been signed by Brown since Dec. 24, although one issued at that time was not completed until this year due to legal requirements.

New program for depressed areas launched

B of A signs low-cost loans on housing in 3 cities

By BOB ANDREW
Staff Writer

The Bank of America has signed contracts with Torrance and two other California cities to process low-cost loans supported by federal fund grants for the rehabilitation of residential property in deteriorating areas.

"You really have to give B of A credit because they were the only ones who were willing to work with us on this," commented William Kowalli, the Torrance deputy city attorney assigned to oversee that city's contract.

When the federal program was first proposed under terms of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (HCDA), Kowalli said this week, Torrance approached 30 lending institutions asking for proposals for a low-cost loan program.

"We got no response at first. I mean nothing — period. Then B of A came up with this offer," Kowalli said.

For the Torrance program, the loans are restricted to rehabilitation projects for owner-occupied residential properties within a specific target area — basically the old downtown area dating from the city's incorporation more than 50 years ago.

"There are already 20 applications in the file but the actual issuing of loans hasn't started yet," reported Alex Romvari, the planning assistant administering the program.

Of the applicants so far only about half qualify because of the federal guidelines on income, Romvari explained. Those income standards are graduated in proportion to the number of dependents in the family and could range as high as $20,000 a year for a family with eight children, he said.

"Before the first loan is issued," Romvari said, "we will set up a priority list starting with the lowest income and going up. Then we will make loans as long as the money lasts. We have $250,000 available this year and we would like to begin getting it to work."

Under the Torrance contract, Kowalli said, the loans will be at 3.75 per cent simple interest.

"The bank will conduct the standard credit check and give the application the same hard look as any loan request," Kowalli said.

If the loan is approved the city will deposit the face value of the loan in a non-interest bearing account. As the borrower pays off the principal, the city's federal funds will be returned to an interest-paying account until they are rolled over into a new loan.

The contract does have a provision for the city to require a loan to be issued even in a case when the bank would normally reject the application.

"In those cases," Kowalli said, "the loan is then immediately sold directly to the city and we become, in effect, the mortgage holder."

The only time there is any charge by the bank for paper work in the credit check process is when the city buys the loan and then it is a standard fee of $75.

The other two cities involved in the program with Bank of America are San Diego and Menlo Park, and other cities are now studying the program, according to Kyhl S. Smeby, a senior vice president of the bank's region.

Contracts with other cities may vary from the Torrance program because each is carefully tailored to community needs.

Smeby announced this week that the overall program conceived by the bank's Social Policy Department provides for rehabilitation of both residential and commercial properties, purchase of older homes, construction of low-cost and senior citizen housing, improvement of downtown areas and acquisition of park and recreation facilities.

L.B.'s Adm. Wilkinson takes directorship in industry

Vice Adm. Eugene (Denis) P. Wilkinson, USN (ret.), a third-generation native of Long Beach, has been elected to the board of directors of Data-Design Laboratories, a diversified engineering services and electronics company.

He was the first commanding officer of the nation's first nuclear-powered submarine, the USS Nautilus, and the first commander of the nation's first nuclear-powered surface ship, the USS Long Beach. He also was executive officer of the submarine Cusk, the first submarine to fire guided missiles.

It is anticipated Wilkinson will lend his expertise in a number of Data-Design's high-technology businesses and in other areas the company is likely to enter.

Wilkinson, 57, was commissioned in 1940 and his career spanned several important assignments, many of which were U.S. Navy pioneer programs. He put in 3½ years with the Submarine Force, U.S. Atlantic Fleet, where he had command of more than 100 ships and 25,000 officers and men. His last Navy assignment was as deputy chief of Naval operations for submarine warfare, where he administered approximately 20 per cent of the total Navy budget.

He was awarded two gold stars in lieu of second and third awards of the Distinguished Service Medal for performance in his last two Navy positions.

His 26 years of nuclear-power experience include technical assignments at two national laboratories and the Atomic Energy Commission, as well as duty as submarine operations advisor for

VICE ADM. WILKINSON

Polaris Operations Atlantic Command. Wilkinson's election to the Data-Design board fills a vacancy caused by the recent resignation of Paul Sampson as president and director of Data-Design. His duties as president have been assumed by Thomas C. Beiseker, chairman of the board of Data-Design and chief executive officer.

Downtown Associates to battle coastal bill

Staff Writer

The Downtown Long Beach Associates board of directors voted unanimously this week to oppose a bill in the state senate that would implement the current provisions of the California Coastal Plan.

The board objected to the coastal plan's lack of recognition of property owner considerations as well as the creation of a state commission with unlimited discriminatory authority.

The plan is not consistent with the principles of representative government because members of the regulating commission would be appointed, the board concluded.

The DLBA represents more than 1,300 long beach retailers, professionals and property owners. The bill they are opposing through their board of directors is SB 1673, authored by Sen. Anthony Beilenson (D-Los Angeles).

The board criticized the coastal plan's area of control, which would extend in some places to the nearest mountains or at least five miles inland.

All local governments, they claim, would be relegated to the role of administrator because coastal planning would have to be approved by the state commission.

The board also made the following objections:

The plan would not serve as a guideline because it would have the full force of law;

The state commission would have veto power over energy facilities, public works projects and developments which could affect use of water, land, air space or other coastal resources;

No agricultural land larger than 20 acres could be converted to non-agricultural use;

There would be no balance on the commission because all members are to be of "demonstrated ability and commitment to carry out the coastal plan";

Once passed by the Legislature, amendments to the bill could be made without further recourse to the Legislature;

Compensation

from state funds is to be made to private organizations such as Coast Watchers and the Orange County Environmental Coalition;

Ports, airports and universities must submit long-range plans for development which could force them to close up or to be at a disadvantage;

Coastal cities must bear extra costs for statewide benefits;

Any developer may be faced with the possible challenge that recreational use would be more appropriate than any other use for a particular area. One person can issue such a challenge, causing expense and delay.

'Lion' too slow, too short, too bad Ali wins: Ho hum

SAN JUAN (AP) — Heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali tore down Jean-Pierre Coopman with his punches, then tried to build him up with words.

"He's a gentleman . . . he smiled at me every day," said Ali, after knocking out the Belgian challenger with a flurry of punches in the fifth round of their scheduled 15-round heavyweight championship bout Friday night.

Through an interpreter, Coopman said: "It felt like 500 pounds were falling on me, and I fell down."

"I'm glad he's not hurt," Ali said of Coopman, who was outclassed from the opening bell.

"It may not look like it, but it was a tough fight," Ali insisted.

It certainly didn't look that way to those at ringside.

All opened the fifth round circling and rifling jarring left jabs into the face of the plodding Coop-

man. As the round drew to a close, Ali unleashed a rapid-fire series of bombs to Coopman's head and the challenger crumpled in his corner, to be counted out at 2:46 of the round by referee Ismael Quinones Falu.

"He's hard to hit. He's a scientific defensive fighter," Ali said of Coopman. To ringsiders, it was hard to recall any of Ali's punches that missed.

Coopman had no offense. He couldn't have landed more than two or three punches to Ali's head and was ineffectual to the champion's body as well. In fact, the flashiest part of the Belgian were his bright red boxing trunks, plastered with advertisements.

Coopman, who says his idol is Joe Frazier, tried to pursue Ali in a style similar to Frazier—but he was a weak imitation of Smokin' Joe.

It was obvious that Ali could name the round, and it was the fifth when he fed the Lion of Flanders a lightning diet of head punches—and the Lion had had his fill.

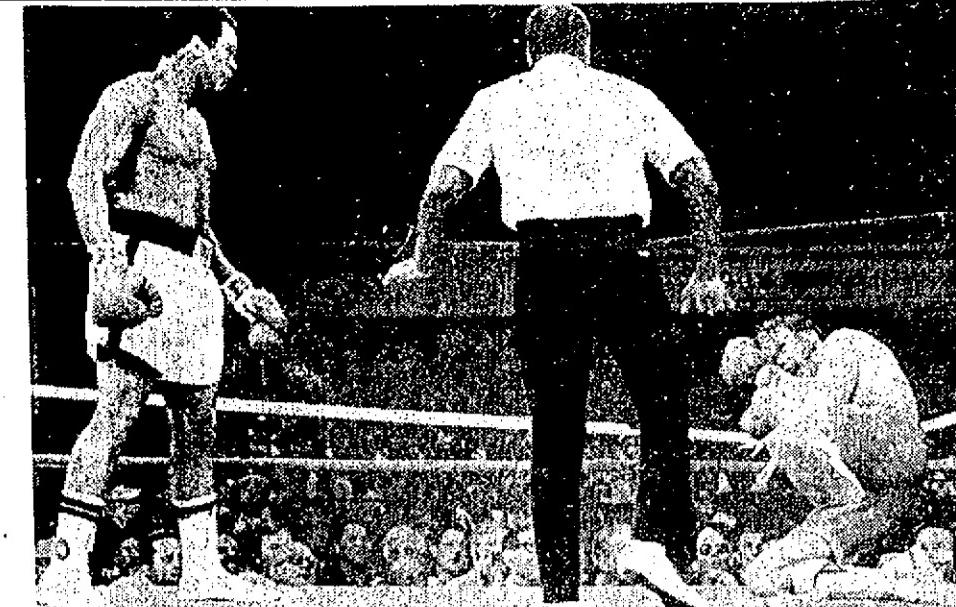

At 34, 6-foot-3 and 228 pounds, Ali was too experienced, too heavy and too fast for the 29-year-old sculptor. The 6-foot Coopman came in at 206.

All got $1.1 million, and while it was far from being his biggest payday, it might have been his easiest.

Coopman earned about $100,000 for his shellacking. It was more money than the Belgian had earned in all 27 of his previous fights, 24 of which he had won.

Coopman came in to the fight with a winning streak of 11. But those victories were over men with such names as Rosati, Faustino, Syvere and Anobebene.

The opponent this time was the world champion, who proved to be far beyond Coopman's class.

Watson learns fast, leads L.A. Open

By DOUG IVES
Staff Writer

A bright, young psychology major from Stanford University, Tom Watson, is not afraid to solicit advice from the experts, even in the game of golf he played so brilliantly in 1975.

Not satisfied with his start this season, the 26-year-old Watson asked for and received a putting lesson from old pro Jerry Barber last week, a tip which could pay big dividends in the $185,000 Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open.

Watson shattered the Riviera Country Club course record on the front nine Friday, carding a 6-under 29, and went on to register a 66 which boosted him into a two-stroke lead at the midway point of this 50-year-old tournament.

Watson's 9-under 133, the equal of the tournament record set by Ben Hogan in 1948 and tied by Pat Fitzsimons last year, kept another old pro, Don January, out of the limelight. January, 46, posted a 67 to trail by two at 135.

Watson is 18th on the money list this year with $18,317 in earnings. But for one who pocketed $153,795 in 1975, winning the British Open, the World Series of Golf and finishing in the top 10 in all four major tournaments, this isn't any great achievement.

So Watson went to Barber, acknowledged as one of the truly fine putters, and asked what was wrong. Barber told him he was hitting too much off the right side and that his left shoulder was too high.

"I have to credit Barber for my success here," said the freckle-faced Watson. "I shifted my weight like he told me and now I'm accelerating through the ball. I've made a lot of good putts this week."

One he didn't make was on the 18th hole. He three-putted, missing a 3 1/2-footer. But Watson insisted that the few which didn't fall, including that one, was because he misread the green.

Watson, from Steamboat Springs, Colo., by way of Kansas City, birdied six of the nine holes on the front, dropping putts of 10, 4, 12, 12, 3 and 10 feet. He missed a 12-footer on the second, an 18-footer on the fourth and had to save a 4-foot putt on the ninth.

The back side played tougher. Watson parred the first eight before the 3-putt ninth. He had birdie chances on the 15th, 16th and 17th but misread all the putts, the last one of four feet.

Believe it or not by Ripley—and Stones!

NEW YORK (AP) — Pole vaulter Dan Ripley of the Pacific Coast Club of Long Beach and high jumper Dwight Stones of Long Beach State established all-time highs at the U.S. Olympic Invitational track meet Friday night at Madison Square Garden.

Ripley vaulted 18-3 1/4 to terminate the indoor record of 18-3 1/4 set last Friday night at Toronto by Wladyslaw Kozakiewicz of Poland.

Ripley, who held the mark of 18-1 at the beginning of the season, boosted it to 18-1 1/4 at College Park, Md., and raised it to 18-2 1/4 at Los Angeles. Another Pole, Tadeusz Slusarski, cleared 18-3 before his countryman broke it again last week.

Ripley cleared the record height on his third and final attempt. The bar fluttered several times but remained on the stanchions. He jogged a lap around the track to the cheers of 11,541 fans.

Stones' leap surpassed his own previous pinnacle of 7-5 1/4, established a year ago. The record came on his sixth jump—all successful—of the competition. It was the second highest jump ever recorded, trailing only Stones' outdoor standard of 7-6 1/2 that he established in 1973.

WINNERS (all distances in meters): 80-m. high jump—Olin Duhon (Decatur AC) 5.6; 35-hurdles—Tom Hill (Army) 7.1; 1,500—Phil Kane (Villanova) 3:45.4; 1,000—Mark Belje (Villanova) 2:24.1; 400-m. relay (USC, Penn, Princeton, Cornell, Oregon, Miami, D.C. Stingers) 7:59.3; 300-m. hurdles—Ron Morris (Selon Hill) 1:50.5; 300-m. Evans Jennings (Mississippi St.) 8.2; Women's 80-m. high jump—Tadeusz Slusarski (Police AL) 6.3; Women's 400—Debra Armstrong (Florida TC) 5:11; Women's 800—Robin Campbell (Wash. D.C.) 2:07.8; Women's 1,500—Priscilla Latrice (Pacific Coast Club) 4:20.0.

Celtics run circles around the Lakers

It was a familiar story. The tireless Boston Celtics, as they have done so many times before, ran circles around the Lakers Friday night.

Maintaining a withering pace to the end, Boston spurted away in the final 10 minutes to post a 125-113 victory before 14,934 fans at the Forum.

The defeat, combined with a Seattle win, dropped the Lakers into third place in the Pacific Division for the first time since Jan. 11. The Lakers play in Seattle Sunday.

Center Dave Cowens was the ring-leader of the Boston victory, outscoring Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, 27-20, and outbounding his taller adversary by an incredible 24-7.

The rebounding was instrumental.

Guards Charley Scott and Jo Jo White also were outstanding. Scott survived two hard spills to score 28 points and White chipped in with 24.

Laker guards Gail Goodrich and Lucius Allen exceeded that output, Goodrich netting 33 and Allen 27. But Boston also had steady Paul Silas adding 19 points and 13 rebounds.

Scott was the difference down the stretch. An out-of-control player at Phoenix, he takes only high-percentage shots in Boston's well-rounded offense and he hit six in a row in the decisive fourth period.

The Lakers twice trailed by 14 points but rallied to catch the Celtics once and closed to within one point, 97-96. Then

Scott went on a spree and the Lakers never caught up.

Boston had lost four of five games on its current trip. But the Laker defense, so effective just a week ago, broke down badly against the Celtics' run-and-gun tactics.

Coach Bill Sharman of the Lakers acknowledged the winners for their spirited play but was upset that Abdul-Jabbar was taking a pounding from Cowens' and Silas while the referees watched.

"There is a double standard in this league," he growled. "Abdul-Jabbar is do good that the refs don't protect him. The Celtics shoved him around all night."

Bumped or not, Abdul-Jabbar didn't have his usual shooting touch. He missed 16 of 24 shots. His rebound total of seven was his worst effort of the year, and bumping had nothing to do with this.

Sharman came to grips with the fact that his team can't out-run most NBA teams, so he has emphasized defense in recent weeks. But even using his best defenders did nothing to slow the Celtics.

"I don't know what's the matter," the coach moaned. "Until the Houston game Wednesday night and the game tonight we had been making good strides on defense. Now we give up easy baskets, just like we were doing in December and January."

St. Anthony wins, deadheats for title

Junior forward Jim Donnelly scored a season-high 28 points and grabbed 16 rebounds as St. Anthony High defeated host Bishop Amat 73-66 Friday night.

The win, combined with Mater Dei's 63-57 upset loss to Servite, enabled St. Anthony to finish the regular season in a tie for the Angelus League title with Mater Dei. The schools finished the regular season with 8-2 records.

The Jack Errion-coached Saints won the title outright last season.

St. Anthony never trailed, held off the biggest lead of the evening (12 points) after three periods.

Bishop Amat rallied in the final quarter, closing to within five points with five minutes remaining, but Donnelly's inside scoring kept St. Anthony safely ahead the rest of the way.

Donnelly collected 20 points and 21 rebounds in St. Anthony's first meeting with Bishop Amat.

Senior guard Dave Ramsey added 17

Pistons 102, Bullets 87

DETROIT — Eric Morey and Curtis Rowe sparked a second-half comeback which saw Detroit outscore Washington 61-38 en route to victory. The Pistons trailed by 17 points early in the third period, but reeled off 14 unanswered points and finally got up to stay after three periods at 71-66. Morey and Rowe each had 10 points in the quarter. At one stage in the fourth period, the Pistons outscored the Bullets, 32-7, in less than 12 minutes.
